Killer may be married

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Convicted murderer Gary Mark Gilmore, who claims he would rather be executed than spend a life in prison, may ask to be married before he faces a firing squad, his attorney said Saturday.

And Samuel W. Smith, the warden at Utah Prison who must approve inmate marriages, said he would consider such a request from Gilmore — though he sees little value in it.

Smith, who has prohibited news interviews with Gilmore, said a London newspaper's interview with Gilmore in which the marriage issue arose was "a slip-up in security." The telephone interview was arranged by the condemned man's lawyer.

Gilmore's execution has been stayed by Gov. Calvin Rampton awaiting a meeting Wednesday of the state Board of Pardons. The execution had been scheduled for Monday.

Pardons Board Chairman George Latimer has said the board would have little choice but to ask for a new execution date if Gilmore insists on death.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Robert B. Hansen said Friday Gilmore's execution could be conducted one week after the board considers his case. The new date would have to be set by Judge Robert Bullock, who had set the Monday date bypassed by Rampton's stay.

Gilmore's attorney, Dennis Boaz, confirmed a London Daily Express report that Gilmore has thought about marriage to Nicole Barrett of Springville, Utah, a divorced mother of two whom prison authorities said visits the inmate daily. He said Gilmore is "considering marriage, but he hasn't discussed the matter with the warden."

Smith said he would consider a marriage request if he received one, but added, "I have not been approached and so I have no position. Without any deep review in the matter, I can see no value in it."

Mrs. Barrett, unavailable to reporters recently, said in a television interview several days ago she shares the "debt" in Gilmore's admitted slaying of a motel clerk.

The woman and Gilmore's uncle, Vern Damico of Provo, have said Gilmore's mood changed after Mrs. Barrett told him she was returning to her former husband. They said this was shortly before the motel clerk was killed.

Boaz said he arranged the interview when offered $250, which he said he split equally with Gilmore. Gilmore's share will be given to Mrs. Barrett, Boaz said.

Of the interview, Smith said, "Obviously, Mr. Boaz should be aware he has no authorization to give out prison privileges. He isn't the warden."

"There was a slip-up in security," Smith said. "Without authorization, Mr. Boaz maneuvered a phone call. It was entirely out of line."

Boaz said he did no know he needed authorization, adding, "It's the first time anyone has offered money and Gilmore said it was fine, Nicole needed the money. It was the only transaction and the offer was cash."

The London Daily Mail said it also had interviewed Gilmore by telephone, but Smith said he was unaware of that.

Winter approaching

Framed by the slats of a covered bridge, this lake in Potomac, Md., is transformed into a nostalgic scene of winter as the first snow of the season fell in the area. Colder temperatures have also been predicted for Missouri, with snow likely to fall in the southern portion of the state today.

Final phase by Syrians is prepared

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three more Syrian armored brigades moved into position Saturday for the final phase of a plan to halt fighting in Beirut after 19 months of civil war.

Christian sources said one 3,00-man brigade was moving toward the central Lebanese Chouf Mountains to protect Christian villages there surrounded by Druze Moslem warriors and their Palestinian allies.

Two other brigades were moving toward Beirut to reinforce 6,000 Syrian troops already in and around the capital, they added. Syrian officers said their tanks and armored cars would move Sunday into the embattled city center and other flashpoints.

Palestinian guerrillas of the so-called rejection front told newsmen that they had orders to accept the Syrian peacekeepers without resistance. This is despite claims from their leadership that the Syrian intervention here is designed to bring the guerrillas to heel.

But in the meantime, sporadic shelling and sniping continued in the once-lively commercial district near the Mediterranean port, now lying in ruins with sunken ships blocking the harbor.

"We will abide by the cease-fire decision," said a guerrilla of the Iraqi-backed Arab Liberation Front, fighting near the port. "But our command has told us that we should respond to any fire on us. We respond with strength sufficient to make sure they don't fire on us again."

Scattered shelling into residential districts also continued on both sides of the three-mile line dividing Beirut. Hospital and militia sources estimated more than 15 killed in the last 24-hour period.

The rejection front, made up of groups hostile to any negotiation with Israel, controls the first mile of the Beirut battle zone. It leads up from the port through a demolished beehive of markets and stalls that once was the center of Middle East commerce.

Carter's job now: pick Cabinet

ATLANTA (AP) — Now that Jimmy Carter has sorted out his personal staff, his next big step is to pick Cabinet officers to help him with the bigger problems ahead.

Carter already has indicated that he expects to face major decisions as soon as he takes the oath of office in January, principally at first on the economy and whether it needs boosting.

But before he can approach Congress with any substantive programs, he has to have his own team in shape to back him up. And that is what is foremost on the minds of the Carter organization.

A first step toward lining things up was the meeting in Plains, Ga., over the weekend between Carter, transition chief Jack Watson and campaign manager Hamilton Jordan. One of their leading objectives was to sort out responsibilities.

"There is too much crossover right now," one veteran Carter staffer said. "The only delineation so far is that Hamilton is clearly in charge of White House staff and Jack is clearly in charge of the Cabinet."

Watson's talent bank has been screening names and outlining job requirements for some time with a view to selection of Cabinet members and government agency officials after a series of interviews.

Jordan's assignment to oversee creation of Carter's personal White House staff is new and reaffirms his standing in light of reports of a mild rivalry between him and Watson for influence in the administration.

It also became clear Jordan was reasserting his influence when it was announced over the weekend he will will shift his base from Atlanta to Washington to work with Watson's transition group.

Before the election, Watson prepared preliminary lists of potential appointees for every department except the White House staff, saying that would be left up to Carter personally. Carter's delegation of it to Jordan reflects the role Jordan played in his administration as governor of Georgia.

Watson, a young Atlanta lawyer, is the technician who put together the voluminous and detailed transition studies for Carter. Jordan's strong point is considered to be his political savvy, a major attribute when it comes to filling sensitive positions which must be confirmed by Congress.

Working with both sides of the appointments effort is Frank Moore, the Carter veteran who is heading the President-elect's congressional liaison office in Washington.

During the campaign, Moore worked to coordinate with Democratic congressional races but also to line up cooperation for the future.

He has mapped out the Senate committees which must confirm no less than 878 Carter appointments, as well as the corresponding House committees they must work with.

Following up Moore's own advance efforts, Carter has personally contacted the top congressional leadership and the committee chairmen and is now down to the subcommittee level and ranking minority members.

The object of all this care, Jordan and Moore point out, is that finding the ideal man for the job does no good if he can't be confirmed without ruffling a lot of feathers or if he can't get along with Congress later.

And getting along with Congress is going to be one of the biggest problems facing Carter despite the overwhelming Democratic majorities in both houses.

The reason is that the major objectives Carter has announced — government reorganization and tax reform — fall squarely across the most jealously guarded prerogatives of Congress.

Meanwhile, Carter is moving on other fronts so his administration can move swiftly when it is completed and in office.

The transition team he appointed this past week will be looking at more than the exchange of reins. The members are specialists in their areas of government and want to put Carter's stamp on it as quickly as possible.

What does a VP do?

ST. JOHN, Virgin Islands (AP) — Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale left his vacation hideaway Saturday to return to ... who knows what?

His new job, being vice president of the United States, has been variously described — usually less than flatteringly.

"A spare tire on the automobile of government," snorted John Nance Garner, who had the job under Franklin D. Roosevelt. "Not worth a bucket of warm spit."

"About as useful as a cow's fifth teat," declared Harry S. Truman.

"Four years of silence," said Alben W. Barkley.

"Standby equipment," complained Nelson A. Rockefeller.

"Indoor work that requires no heavy lifting," decided Bob Dole, who lost to Mondale in the November election.

No less a personage than John Adams, the first vice president, called the vice presidency "the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived."

Thomas R. Marshall, who was Woodrow Wilson's vice president, used to tell a story to illustrate the point.

"Once there were two brothers, " he

'Dead' man returns to local haunts — quite alive

By OWEN C. HARDY
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

When Bill Goldberg heard that a body had been fished out of the Missouri River in Kansas City last April 22, he didn't spring into action like he had so many times past. The trauma of going through the whole, agonizing process of identification even one more time held him back, and he did nothing.

Two weeks later, unable to stand the thought that the body remained unaccounted for, and knowing that his father was still missing, he made the phone call that eventually led to the terrible conclusion. His long search was over. His father was dead.

Goldberg's mother said her son inspected the body, although in a terribly deteriorated state, and identified it as that of his father. "My son viewed the body," she said, "the dental charts and the body marks...the body was in pretty bad condition...even when he viewed it he was just sure it was his Dad." His wife added that the body met all the pathologist's specifications for a body identificaion.

Harold Alexander Goldberg, 69, formerly of Sedalia and Tipton, was buried in Mount Washington Cemetery, Kansas City, on May 7, 1976.

Six months later, Harold Alexander Goldberg walked through the front door of the State Fair Restaurant, Sedalia, very much alive.

"Harry, is that you?" an amazed Gene Landon, the restaurant's owner, asked.

"I hear that they found me dead in Kansas City," Goldberg replied, according to Landon.

"He came in and sat down at the counter," Landon recalls, "It can't be, I thought." But when Landon heard Goldberg's voice, there was no mistake. It was Harry Goldberg, all right, the same Harry Goldberg that had disappeared from Tipton over two years ago, and who had been reported dead just last spring.

"It's kind of a long story and I don't feel like talking about it right now," was Goldberg's response when contacted by The Democtat-Capital Friday. That was understandable. Because, according to Goldberg's wife and daughter-in-law, for the past two years Harry Goldberg has been someone else — Harold Gordon.

The story began at 7 p.m., Jan. 28, 1974, in Tipton. That was the last time anyone remembered seeing Goldberg, who had been the former operator of the Butterfield Inn, located at the corner of Highway 50 and Route 5, and who had operated a number of restaurants in Sedalia in past years.

Goldberg reportedly left with nothing more than "a change of clothes or two" in his hand, Tipton police chief Gordon Williams said at the time.

From there, the story is related as one of a man who literally forgot much of the history of his former life. According to various sources, Goldberg went to Ogden, Utah, where he stayed for about seven months. He then came back to Missouri, settling in Springfield, where he got a job with the Golden Lion Supper Club there.

That was when Jack Crockett entered Harry Goldberg's — or Gordon's — life. Crockett operated the Elk's Club in Independence, Kan., and hired Goldberg — who was now going by the name of Gordon — away from Springfield about two years ago.

It was October, 1974, when Goldberg first showed up for work in Independence, Crockett recalls. "Yes, he worked for me for two years...wonderful guy," Crockett said.

Goldberg worked for Crockett for about a year and a half, before moving with his employer to Forsyth, Mo., a resort town of about 800 persons at Table Rock Lake. There Crockett managed the Shatterrock Lodge, a restaurant and motel, and Goldberg became not only Crockett's cook but also a somewhat unofficial member of the Crockett family.

"We kind of more or less adopted the old boy," said Crockett. His five children "kind of thought the world of him," he said.

The time with the Crockett family was apparently a fairly happy one for Goldberg. "He wasn't shy at all," Crockett said. His employe was outgoing with most of the customers and "he even sat at the table and talked with Susan Ford (President Gerald Ford's daughter) when she was here... he sent the President a loaf of cinnamon bread."

The family — Goldberg included — also took trips together. When they were back in Independence, there was a trip to Crockett's sister's in Wichita, Kan., and more recently, last Memorial Day, the Crockett "family" visited Shell Knob at Table Rock Lake.

One day, however, as Crockett was tending the lodge, a group of about six to eight persons walked in together. Soon afterwards, one of them came up to Crockett and asked him, "Is that Harold Goldberg?" pointing to his elderly employe.

"No, that's Harold Gordon," Crockett replied.

"Did he have a restaurant in Tipton?" was the next question.

"Yes," Crockett said.

"Did he have a restaurant in Sedalia?"

"Yes" again.

After commenting on the striking resemblence and the remarkable coincidence, the visitors left. Crockett, who said "I never had any reason to doubt Harry," asked Goldberg point-blank, "some people want to know if you're Harry Goldberg." After pausing to think, Crockett related, Goldberg said, "Yes, I am."

Unknown grave

Somewhere underneath the ground at about this spot at the Mount Washington Cemetery in Kansas City is an unmarked grave, until recently thought to have been occupied by Harry Goldberg, formerly of Sedalia and Tipton. Goldberg showed up in town a week ago, so now the question becomes — who's buried here?

Electoral college revamp approved

Only two of the 10 persons responding to last week's "Sound Off" question favored keeping the present system of electing a president.

The question asked: "This year's close presidential election raised anew questions about the electoral college system, with some observers fearing that one candidate might possibly have won the popular vote but not the electoral vote. Based on what you know about the electoral college, do you favor its abolishment?"

"I think the electoral college system should be abolished," wrote one of the eight readers who responded with a "yes" vote. "If people vote for something, I think their vote should be counted.

"If these electoral votes were divided in the amount each one received in a state, it would be different. The way it is at the present time it looks like the loser had no votes in that state. This is not fair. Let's take it back to the popular vote of the country."

One of the two persons voting "no" had this to say:

"I was disappointed in the outcome of the Nov. 2 election but do not favor abolishment of the electoral college. Election by popular vote could mean that heavily populated cities like New York City, Los Angeles, Chicago and Philadelphia could elect our President and I don't want them deciding for me."

Frank D. Cook, 1203 South Massachusetts, voted "yes" and explained why:

"The founders of our nation were by no means infallible—and the electoral college is one proof. If one-man-one vote is good for local government, it is for the national. Do away with the electoral college and count the votes honestly .... The open spaces will count as well as boss-controlled cities."

One reader who voted "yes" said the electoral college may have deterred a write-in campaign for Ronald Reagan. She said a Reagan write-in may have prevented any candidate from receiving the required number of electoral votes.

"I think that was the thinking of the League of Women Voters why they refused to let McCarthy or Maddox on the debates," she said. "Of course I could be wrong."

Ron Harris, 1118 East 10th, said that besides no longer being necessary, the electoral college is to a large degree responsible for voter apathy.

Voters in small states with only three or four electoral votes are not encouraged to vote, he said, when the fact remains that the 11 most populous states have a combined total of 272 electoral votes, two more than necessary to win.

"There are, as I see it, two possible solutions to this problem," he said. "The first solution and the one I personally prefer is to abolish the electoral system completely, resulting in the president being elected by popular vote. The other solution available is to continue the electoral college with one revision. The electoral votes could be distributed among the candidates on a state-by-state basis according to each candidate's percentage of the state's total popular vote. This change in the electoral college would essentially follow the current methods used by both parties in selecting their presidential candidates by the primary process.

"Although I prefer the first solution, I feel either method would result in a larger voter turnout. Either method would convince the average American voter that he really does play an important role in electing the president of the United States."

Sound Off

QUESTION — The election of a Democratic governor and a Republican lieutenant governor in Missouri has again raised the possibility of changing state law to permit the governor and lieutenant governor candidates to run as a team, instead of separately. Do you favor such a change?

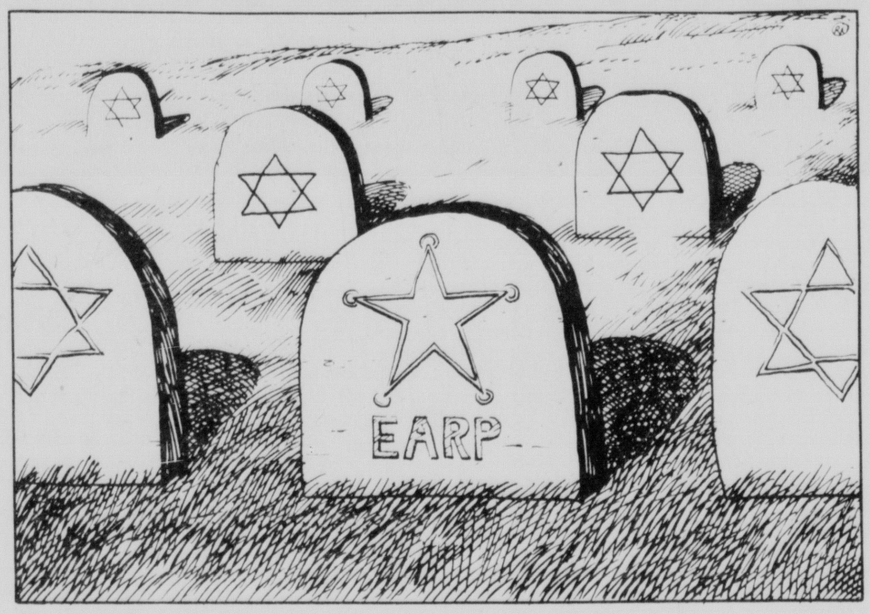
Earp's burial place doesn't jibe with legend

By MURRAY OLDERMAN



COLMA, Calif. (NEA) — The legend of Wyatt Earp doesn't jibe with the simple letters notched in the dark marble stone, which is tilted slightly off the ground and encased in concrete so that nobody'll steal it.

Underneath it lie the ashes of the notorious gunslinger of the Old West — in a Jewish cemetery on a hillside in the fog belt just south of San Francisco.

"Wyatt Earp
1848-1929
1861-1944"

Wyatt Earp, who along with his brothers Morgan and Virgil and consumptive Doc Holliday shot it out with the Clanton gang at the O.K. Corral (Oct. 26, 1881), should—to fit history — be buried in some place like Tombstone or Deadwood or Dodge City.

But here on this sunny Indian summer day — in the well-tended Hills of Eternity cemetery — you find out that Wyatt Earp lived to the ripe old age of 81 and died with his boots off, and that for the ages he reposes in the company of the Marcus family, his Jewish in-laws.

Maury Fitzgerald, a pipe-smoking English professor at the College of San Mateo, led this pilgrimage to the grave of Wyatt Berry Stapp Earp, who was a buffalo hunter, rode shotgun on a stage, was an assistant marshal and blasted and gambled his way through the silver and gold camps of Arizona, Colorado and Alaska before finding sedateness and respectability with Josephine Sarah Marcus, whom he married in 1897.

Earp died in Los Angeles. He was cremated and the ashes later transferred to the Marcus family plot here. The headstone, weighing more than a quarter of a ton, was stolen a couple of times — and once found in some bushes off nearby Skyline Drive — before it was sealed in cement.

The curious still wander by. A history teacher from southern California happens along, with his teenaged sons, and snaps a picture with an Instamatic.

"We get a few every week," says Don Kuczynski, the caretaker, a refugee from Poland and the only Jew in Cemetery Workers Local 265.

Fitzgerald, who brought us here, has more than a pedantic interest in grave sites, too. He is executive secretary-treasurer of the union, which has 450 members stretched out from San Jose to Antioch. Maury has held the job for 17 years while dispensing syntax and grammar to junior college students.

He is the only union leader who lives in Hillsborough, a swank suburb where Bing Crosby is his near neighbor.

But Maury's working domain is Colma, a unique community on the Peninsula ridge below San Francisco. Graves are its main business (there are no active cemeteries in the city). A hundred yards from Wyatt Earp's urn stands the crypt of William Randolph Hearst, the grandfather of Patty, the immensely influential newspaper tycoon who was the model for "Citizen Kane." He lies in adjoining Cypress Lawn Cemetery.

Altogether there are 12 cemeteries in Colma. Fitzgerald, a San Francisco native, picked up spare cash here — $2 a day — digging graves as a 15-year-old high school kid.

"Grave digging isn't what it used to be," he admits. "Forty per cent of our business is now in cremation — except for the orthodox Jewish, Greek and Catholic cemeteries."

Those huge ornate headstones that have traditionally cluttered cemeteries are now out, too. Modest marble monuments with simple lines and simple designations are the fashion.

So Wyatt Earp in his final resting place, noted by a plain marker, fits right in with his neighbors. Little did they realize they'd achieve immortality of a sort by reposing near the man who won the Gunfight at the O.K. Corral.

Sore-toothed bandit makes off with $120

A masked man brandishing a small caliber pistol entered Headquarters Liquors, 702 East Broadway, at 10 a.m. Saturday, complained of a toothache, then robbed the store of $120 in cash, police reported.

Police were searching Saturday night for a black man, approximately 25-30 years old, who entered the liquor store with a blue handkerchief over his mouth, complained to clerk Al Barbour about a toothache, then asked him to change a $20 bill.

Barbour reportedly told the man he did not have change, whereupon the man told Barbour to open the cash register and give him the money, police said.

At that point, Barbour noticed the man was holding a pistol, it was reported.

Barbour gave the man $120 in bills. The man then led Barbour to a back room and told him to stay there. Police said the suspect fled on foot.

No shots were fired in the incident, according to reports.

— In other police news: The T G & Y store at 711 East Broadway was the scene of an attempted break-in sometime Friday night.

C.H. Perkins, store manager, called police when he noticed sunlight coming through an air conditioning vent near the south end of the building Saturday morning.

Police found a side cover removed from the air conditioner, and an inspection cover and ventilation stack removed from another air conditioner, it was reported.

No one entered the building, police said.

Mrs. Warren honored

Goodbye Salute

Adam Fischer, president of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, presents Vivian Warren, Chamber secretary, with a plaque making her an honorary lifetime member of the chamber. She was honored at a retirement dinner Friday night at the Ramada Inn. Among those on hand to salute Mrs. Warren were three past chamber executive managers and 11 past presidents. (Democrat-Capital Photo)

Mrs. Vivian Warren, hailed as "Mrs. Chamber of Commerce," was honored for her 25 years of service to that organization at a retiremen dinner Friday night at the Ramada Inn.

Eleven past Chamber presidents and four three past executive managers were among the 150 persons who attended the testimonial.

Chester Brown, during whose tenure as executive manager Mrs. Warren was hired, and who is now living in Salina, Kan., praised the guest of honor for being a "good friend" and helper. Sam Boyle, another executive manager as well as past president, also commended Mrs. Warren as one whose "record speaks for itself."

Larry Melton, a past executive manager now residing in Union, Mo., said Mrs. Warren was a "hub of the community." Present executive manager Jake Siragusa and a two-term Chamber president, credited Mrs. Warren for many of the ideas the Chamber has adopted, and for being a personal "guide" to him during his terms.

Siragusa presented Mrs. Warren with an inscribed silver platter from the Chamber, and President Adam Fischer gave her a framed resolution from the board declaring her to be an ex-officio officer and permanent Chamber member.

Mrs. Warren, who received a standing ovation from the guests, was also the first woman elected to the board of directors of the Sedalia Chamber.

"I started part-time with the Chamber," Mrs. Warren recalled, "and suddenly it was 25 years."

She thanked those present for making "this evening of my life one of the happiest."

sid. "One ran away to sea. The other was elected vice president.

"Neither was heard of again."

Indeed, Jonathan Dayton of New Jersey, who had signed the Constitution, figured years later that at least one mistake had been made.

He suggested the office of vice president be abolished.

Mr. Dooley, the Irish saloon keeper of Peter Finley Dunne's writings, put it this way: "Th' vice prisidincy ... isn't a crime exactly. Ye can't be sint to jail f'r it, but it's kind iv a disgrace. It's like writin' anonymous letters."

Walter Frederick Mondale, 48, reflective after a week's holiday at Caneel Bay Plantation, the Rockefeller-owned resort on this Virgin Island, found himself possessed of no small amount of puckish humor about the job.

He told this story:

Rockefeller and Sen. Hubert Humphrey, another one-time occupant of the vice presidency, had prepared an inside briefing paper on the official duties of the office Mondale assumes Jan. 20.

"It took up most of a page," Mondale said.

Reporters, not to be outdone in the banter asked: "Where would the strengths of the Minnsesota senator be when be becomes vice president.

In the foreign field or the domestic field?

"I think my strengths are found basically in the domestic and foreign fields," Mondale agreed.

His first priority?

"Well, let me wait a while. I'm working on that. I've got an expert on it."

Economy-minded government blamed in hospital deaths

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — It is too early to say who will be blamed for several deaths at Camarillo State Hospital, but witnesses in the first week of grand jury hearings pointed frequently to an economy-minded state.

No one was as direct as a 55-year-old psychiatric technician, Jack Roberts, who said the cause of one death at the mental hospital was "your senators, your health department and your governor."

Complaining about understaffing and an overload of paperwork at Camarillo, Roberts said: "To really supervise patients under those circumstances — you can't do it."

The grand jury — unlike most, the hearings are open to the public — is investigating 13 deaths which prosecutors have said may result in criminal charges and 42 other questionable deaths out of more than 200 at Camarillo in the last four years.

Patients died by strangulation, drug overdose, suspicious fire, drowning and apparent starvation, the grand jury has been told. The investigation comes on the heels of a year-long inquiry by the Ventura County district attorney's office.

The situation at Camarillo, apparently, is part of a larger problem that reaches back into the administration of former Gov. Ronald Reagan, who left office in 1974. And it's not simply a shortage of money, a legislative committee said recently, but a lack of decisiveness on how to spend available funds.

"The principal reason the (state health) department is having so much difficulty resolving the staffing and capital outlay issues is that it has not yet dealt with the fundamental question — what future role will the state hospitals have in the delivery of services to the mentally and developmentally disabled?" said a background paper produced for a recent hearing by state Sen. Arlen Gregorio's Health and Welfare Committee.

United Way drive may reach its goal

The Sedalia-Pettis County United Way 1976 fund-raising drive has netted approximately $74,000 to date, and should come "awfully close" to its $101,500 goal, according to Dr. Roger Hopkins, United Way campaign chairman.

"We still have a lot of pretty good sized packets out," he said, "and it will be awfully close."

Although the fund raising effort officially ended Friday, Hopkins said he was confident the 1976 goal would be met. "This year it seems more and more people are giving more," he said. "Without people, the United Way doesn't succeed."

Hopkins said donations are accepted throughout the year at the United Way office, 112 West Fourth.

Short in dashboard causes fire in car

A short in the dashboard wiring set fire to a 1976 Ford Granada, owned by Marggie Van Dyne, Route 4, in the Safeway Supermarket parking lot at 4:07 p.m. Friday. Damage was estimated at $1,600, according to a spokesman for the fire department.

According to police, Monica Lynn Cologrante, 28, 109½ East Second, reported a man in a van picked her up as she was walking near 18th and Missouri. She said the man drove around the block, stopped the van and hit her with a bottle.

Americans still like bigger automobiles

DETROIT (AP) — After a fling with little cars, Americans reaffirmed their love for the big ones in the 1976 model year. Full size and intermediate models dominated the industry's list of best sellers.

Eight of the top 10 new domestic cars sold in the recently ended model year were big — four full size and four midsize — while only two were compacts, industry figures show.

The smallest cars — the subcompacts — didn't make the best-seller list for 1976.

By contrast, half of the top 10 sellers in the 1975 model year were compacts or subcompacts, while only two were full size.

Auto analysts say the conditions that sparked a romance two years ago between a fickle public and little cars no longer exist.

"There isn't as much interest in the lowest-priced, fuelstingiest model," said a sales analyst at Ford Motor Co. "The economy has improved, gasoline prices never went to $1 a gallon — like some people had predicted — and fears of another oil embargo have eased."

But at the same time, consumers simply aren't choosing big cars over small ones. Rather, the market is gravitating toward the center.

American Motors Corp. felt the switch from small cars most sharply. The only U.S. car maker still in a sales rut, AMC lost a record $51.1 million in the July-September quarter and ended up $46.3 million in the red for fiscal 1976, ended Sept. 30.

AMC Chairman Roy D. Chapin Jr. said a "sharp fall-off in passenger car sales during the last half of the fiscal year" was the major reason for AMC's losses. He predicted that segment would regain momentum next year.

AMC's domestic car sales so far this year are off 24 per cent from 1975 levels, while the Big Three auto makers are up 27 per cent.

The list of best sellers for 1976 shows people shopping for small cars bought compacts over subcompacts, while bigcar buyers took intermediates over full-size models.

The No. 1 domestic car in the model year was the midsize Oldsmobile Cutlass, which recorded a 67 per cent sales gain from 1975 to shove the perennial leader — the full-size Chevrolet — into second place.

Sales of the Cutlass, the third-best seller in 1975, were 479,600, while the Chevrolet totaled 457,800, a 9 per cent increase from 1975.

Truck is recovered

A 1970 Chevrolet pickup truck, reported stolen from Looney Bloess Lumber Co., Main and Washington, sometime overnight Tuesday, was found by sheriff's department authorities at 10:59 a.m. Saturday about 5½ miles northwest of Sedalia, police reported. : The car apparently was in driveable condition, and was returned to its owner, police reported.

Victim's condition is still critical

COLUMBIA — Walter Paul, 70, a resident of Kathy's Boarding Home in Sedalia, remained in critical condition here Saturday night at the Harry S. Truman Veterans Hospital following a fire in his room Thursday afternoon.

Paul suffered third-degree burns over half his body when he fell asleep and dropped the pipe he was smoking into his chair. He was transferred to the hospital here after being treated at Bothwell Hospital early Thursday night.

Rural fire results in $5,000 damage

Sparks from burning trash apparently blew under a small shed, setting it ablaze and engulfing a larger shed in flames about 5 p.m. Friday at the Maurice S. Schneider farm, Route 1. Total damage to both sheds was listed at $5,000, according to the Pettis County Volunteer Fire Department.

A third shed containing a tractor and pick-up truck, was spared damage when fire fighters soaked it with water.

Destroyed in the fire were a pump house, lumber and tools. The farm is located nine miles south of Sedalia, just east of Highway 65.

☆ Alive

Shortly after that, Goldberg sent a letter to Sedalia, Crockett said, and a week ago today, Goldberg's wife, Irene, arrived to take him back home.

"He's been real close to us," Crockett said, "frankly, he cried like a baby" when he left, even asking if he should leave right away in light of the heavy work-load at the lodge.

Upon hearing the unbelievable news that their father and father-in-law was still alive, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Goldberg, who live in Kansas City, called the Kansas City police department to tell them of the mistake that had been made, that Harry Goldberg was still alive, and that whoever was buried in lot number 288 at the Mount Washington Cemetery under the name of Harry Goldberg — wasn't Harry Goldberg.

In order to establish his identity, Goldberg was fingerprinted here Monday at the Pettis County sheriff's office. Goldberg's prints were sent to Kansas City and were matched up with a set that Goldberg had made during World War II as a cab driver there. (For some inexplicable reason, cab drivers were made to undergo this security precaution during the war).

Goldberg's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Bill Goldberg, describes Goldberg's past condition as an attack of amnesia. And although there are still some "holes to fill in," Mrs. Goldberg said, her father-in-law appears to be on the road to recovery. "We're thankful," she said, "some people live in a state of confusion even after their return to their families." After 34 months of living without Goldberg, with the last six under the illusion that he was gone forever, the past week seems like a miracle, Mrs. Goldberg said.

"You have no idea what it's like to have lost a grandfather, a father, and a father-in-law and then realize that you've got him back again."

The story would seem to end on a happy note if there weren't just one more nagging question. Who is buried in Harry Goldberg's grave?

That question may never be answered. Even when the body was first pulled out of the river last April 22, death was reported to have taken place at least four and possibly eight months before that time. The body was in such an advanced state of decomposition that fingerprints were impossible to take (possibly contributing to the mistaken identity in the first place). And the body has been decomposing for a further six months.

Whatever the unsolved mysteries of Harold Goldberg's strange disappearance, one thing is certain to the Bill Goldberg family: "We're just thankful that he's alive."

Question Answer

Is it true that funeral service companies make an additional charge when they are called out at night or on Sunday?

It is not possible for us to speak for other funeral homes, but we can speak for ourselves when we say there is no extra charge. There is never an additional cost, no matter what time of day or night we are called anywhere in the Sedalia area.

We provide a continuous readiness to serve and have our own thoroughly trained personnel and motor equipment constantly available.

Socially secure

By RICHARD ARMOUR

The Phoenix Nest
Edited by Martin Levin

Social Security is to me a misnomer. Consider those who come across these two words for the first time. They would be justified in thinking that what was being described was something that made people secure socially.

As a timid person, one who is ill at ease at a party or large gathering, I confess to being socially insecure. I shift my weight from one foot to another, chew my lower lip, and continually straighten my tie. The only time I didn't do the last of these was when I wore a turtleneck sweater at a party. Since it turned out that I was the only person who wore a turtleneck sweater, I needed Social Security the worst way.

As a matter of fact, the worst way we have Social Security today is the way we have it. If it is known that Social Security is the only thing you have to live on, now that you are 65 and not gainfully employed, you are not likely to be invited to anyone's party, unless out of sympathy. You would not go anyhow, if invited, because you couldn't afford to give a party in return. What makes you even more socially insecure is to be over 65, self-employed, and not yet 72. You have the choice of keeping your earnings under the maximum allowed ($2760 a year) and getting your Social Security payments, or earning more than this amount and getting not a penny, though you keep paying in. If you keep yourself from working and earning more than the maximum, in order to get Social Security funds, you will be constantly upset, your blood pressure will rise, and your mental faculties will disintegrate. Of course you may ask to be paid in cash, so the Government will not catch up with you, in which case you have nothing but your conscience to make you miserable.

Or you might go ahead and work full tilt, earning more than the very small maximum and not receiving any Social Security checks. This will annoy you, because you have a millionaire friend who despite his large income when he became 65 at once started to receive his Social Security payments. Why? Because his income is from interest and dividends, and by some curious quirk is not counted. Apparently the Government thinks it unseemly, if not downright nasty, for anyone over 65 to work.

Knowledge of this makes you not only socially insecure but so testy and argumentative (on the subject of Social Security) that you are never invited out.

And those who have seen you in one of your bad moods won't come to your house if they are invited in.

One way you can continue working and still get Social Security is to live to 72. As one who is supplied with a poor set of genes, no male in my family for the past three generations having lived beyond the age of 59, I think my chances of making it to 72 are almost nil. But while others are counting their blessings, I am counting my calories. I do not smoke. I drink very little. And I do floor exercises and jog every day.

Until recently I did not wish to become old. But now I can hardly wait to become 72. Though the longevity odds are against me, I'm making a try at it.

Then and only then, for I intend to keep working, will Social Security be mine. I shall feel secure at whatever social event. My glasses may have thick lenses, my hearing aid may have to be adjusted frequently, and my dentures may click like castanets. But I shall be a welcome guest because of my gaiety and high spirits.

I shall have Social Security at last, and be secure socially. But I know what will happen if I become 72. I shall hope to become 73, 74, 75, and so on, until (I don't know at what advanced age) I shall be paid back what I paid in during all those years.

Of course the year I become 72 will probably be the year Social Security goes broke. No longer able to work, I shall become both socially insecure and financially insecure.

Once again I insist that Social Security should be called something else. I have several names for it, but I couldn't use them here.

Days are numbered

GOP plans to exit with bang in D. C.

WASHINGTON (P) — The Republican social crowd's days are numbered, but it won't leave unnoticed.

The Grand Old Party will exit with a final salute to a home in which, for at least four years, it no longer can flourish.

The exodus will be trumpeted with a series of farewell bashes marking the end of eight years of Republican domination of the executive branch. Then the GOP socialites will go off to distant shores — to be remembered for the glitter they once provided.

They rarely will be seen after Jimmy Crter's crowd moves in and establishes a new social hierarchy.

Not since John F. Kennedy replaced Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1961 has the contrast between the incoming and outgoing administrations been so stark.

Champagne and caviar are expected to be replaced by bourbon and barbecues. White-tie formal dinners will give way to casual suppers. Individuals with famous names will be succeeded by, if you'll pardon the expression, plain folks.

"You'll be seeing people — people at the White House — not just fancy names, but regular people," predicts Mary Finch Hoyt, Mrs. Carter's campaign press secretary.

"You'll see names of people who have walked the streets with the Carters, people who have opened their houses to them during the campaign.

"Rosalynn has not lived in Washington and is not hidebound by tradition," she adds.

New names will suddenly appear on newspaper society pages nd in gossip columns.

Smith Bagley, heir to a tobacco fortune and grandson of R.J. Reynolds, may be pacesetter. Carter rented Bagley's plantation on St. Simons Island for a vacation after the election.

The tone of the new administration probably will be established by the Jan. 20 inauguration.

The President-elect has ordered a modest, "people-oriented" inauguration, said a press aide, adding that Carter still plans to wear a top hat, ride in a parade and attend a formal inauguration ball.

"It will be modest but not extravagant," said Bardyl R. Tirana. "Plain folks will have more of a role."

"This inaugural will show the President is one of the people, not someone elevated to higher status," added Vicki Rogers.

Although plans have not been formalized, Miss Rogers said, "Whatever is done, it won't be white tie. Everyone will be welcome in Washington."

At the White House, another feature might be large, working dinners.

"When Carter was governor, they used to invite 250 people three nights a week. They were working dinners," said Mrs. Hoyt.

"I could see that happening at the White House. For instance, if they were trying to reorganize the Department of Transportation, they (the Carters) might invite the people involved to talk about it over dinner," she said.

Breakaway Lutherans form synod

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — Representatives of breakaway parishes of the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod met Friday to form a new synod to be called the English Synod.

A spokesman for the group said the new synod will consist of 75 parishes, 68 of which broke away from the Missouri Synod in June in a doctrinal dispute.

Eighteen of the parishes are located in Chicago. The others are in Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and downstate Illinois, the spokesman said.

Dr. Harold Hecht of Detroit, acting president, was formally given the post of president by a unanimous vote.

The English Synod and five others being formed across the country as a result of a conservative-moderate split over literal interpretation of the Bible plan to meet in Chicago in December to create the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

Ben Franklin chose roads as postmaster

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Some of the earliest advances in the art of road building in the United States were achieved by Benjamin Franklin while he served as postmaster general.

Franklin himself, says the National Automobile Club, surveyed and selected new road sites that would improve postal service. In 1763, for instance, he surveyed, charted and marked with milestones the Boston Post Road that now forms part of U.S. Highway 1.

Frankfurter vendor takes pride in hurling

GRAND ISLAND, Neb. (AP) — Monday through Friday, Steve Potter is Hall County's chief deputy attorney. On Saturday, he wears an undersized suit and a hand-painted tie and tosses hot dogs to the fans at a football stadium.

"It's a thing of pride with me to be able to place a hot dog in a fan's hand," he said. "The hot dog becomes a football, and the fan becomes a tight end."

Potter, 31, has been a vendor since 1963, and his throwing skill and distinctive dress have helped him build up a clientele among University of Nebraska football fans at Memorial Stadium in Lincoln.

Potter said Cornhusker followers have approached him in places as far away as the Florida Keys with a gleam of recognition in their eyes.

"You'll think this is crazy," they say, "but aren't you the hot dog man?"

Potter claims that on a windless day he can throw a hot dog three fourths of the way up the single-tier grandstand. He said the fans never fail to toss him the 50 cents in return.

The attorney points out that selling hot dogs is just one of a wide variety of occupations he's tried.

He is a registered pharmacist, and he held a night job at an Omaha drug store while he attended Creighton Law School.

He's also a part-time instructor at Kearney State College, where he teaches psychology and three criminal justice courses.

Potter has studied art in New York and worked as a drug counselor in Omaha and a bartender in Lincoln.

Black, 70, wins decision

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A man who spent eight years unsuccessfully fighting a Florida law school's bar against blacks has finally won permission to practice law in the state — at the age of 70.

The Florida Supreme Court ruled Friday that Virgil Hawkins would not have to take the state bar examination.

Hawkins was twice denied admission to the University of Florida law school in actions upheld by the state court, and Friday's unanimous opinion said he had a "claim on this court's conscience."

In 1949, Hawkins was denied admission to the school on the basis that state law at the time barred blacks. The denial was upheld by the state Supreme Court.

In 1954, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the decision and ordered that Hawkins' application be considered. School officials gain refused to let him in, and the state Supreme Court upheld that denial in 1957, saying that to admit Hawkins could produce "grave public mischief."

Hawkins did not appeal that decision, and instead enrolled in the New England School of Law in 1964.

Last year he asked to be allowed to practice law in Florida through "diploma privilege" because he had graduated from the New England school.

The Florida Bar Association argued that while other requirements should be waived, Hawkins should be forced to take the bar exam because the "public deserves to be protected" from those who cannot pass it.

However, the court held that the record supported a decision waiving the requirement.

The court ordered that Hawkins, who has recently been working in public relations in Eustis, be admitted to the bar unless a character report by the Florida Board of Bar Examiners turned up anything wrong.

They added that before Hawkins can practice on his own, he will have to complete a six-month internship program under a practicing attorney.

At wit's end

Kids and phases

By ERMA BOMBECK

Once —just once — I wish my kids would go through a "phase" all at the same time.

When I had one napping during the day and sleeping all night, one was napping at night and sleeping all day and a third was running around day and night like a hamster with a problem.

When one was teething, the other was biting and the other was in his spitting syndrome. After the younger got his teeth he moved up to biting, the middle progressed to spitting and the older one graduated to pinching. They were never all dry at once. Never without tears all at once. Or ever in a good mood all at once.

I heard a child psychologist say, "Your child changes every day. He slips from one phase into another like a car shifting its gears," I wish Ralph Nader would recall all three of them and check 'em out.

At the moment, we have one child (repeat: one child) going through her "Little Mother" syndrome. She is so helpful, so loving, and so perfect, we are all ready to kill her now and canonize her later.

To her brothers she will say, "Do you want me to turn your radio down before Mom and Dad take the batteries out again?" Or, "Shall I drop in your homeroom when I get to school and tell your teacher you are going to be late because you can't find your shoes?" Or (I hate this one) "You boys are getting on Mommy's nerves and you know what shape nerves are in at her age."

To her father she will coo: "If you need lunch money, I can give you back the money you gave me for each A. You might just as well borrow it as the bank." Or, "You want me to make some of those cookies for you that Mama is always too busy to make?"

The other day she said, "Mama, I made your bed for you." "I know," I yawned. "I just went to the bathroom and was going to crawl back into it."

"I keep forgetting how much sleep you need," she said solicitously.

Then yesterday, a strange thing happened. I said, "Will you let the dog in?"

She snarled, "Anyone so stupid he can't turn a doorknob ought to stay outside." A smile crept across my face. Her gears had slipped into her semi-rotten stage.

"I'll let the dog in, Mommy," said her younger brother. "After all, a dog is just a helpless animal. He can't help it that his little paws . . ."

"Oh, shut up," I snarled. I go through phases, too, ' you know.

No big changes noted in recount

President-elect Jimmy Carter lost five votes in Pettis according to the official election returns verefied this week by County Clerk Mary Jane Wilson.

Carter was originally credited with 7,892 votes, but the official recount moved that figure back to 7,887. Other changes in final tallies in scattered contests were also recorded, but none affected the outcome of any local race.

The greatest change came in the case of Paul White, the unopposed incumbent candidate for western district judge of the Pettis County Court. White's original tallies totaled 5,257, but the recount credited him with 266 additional votes for a total of 5,523.

Running close behind White, in terms of misplaced votes, was unsuccessful Democratic attorney general candidate James Baker. In Baker's case, however, the count went the other way — he ended up losing 260 votes, dropping his original total of 7,044 to 6,784.

Robert L. Dunning, Democrat candidate for 117th District State Representative, lost 47 votes in Pettis County, pulling his total down from 659 to 612. Eastern district judge Russell McFatrick accumulated seven more votes, moving his total up from 4,516 to 4,523.

Long way from Butcher Holler for country queen

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — It's a long way from Butcher Holler, in Eastern Kentucky, to a suite in the Century Plaza Hotel here, but Loretta Lynn has made it. As the uncrowned queen of country music, she's made a lot more, too.

But there's still a lot of the backwoods girl in Loretta Lynn, and chances are that's the way she'll stay. She paddles around her room barefoot (although her toenails are polished) and she peppers her speech with a lot of Kentucky phrases.

She's short, dark-haired, stocky. She's unpretentious and friendly. And, on the strength of her way with a country ballad, she's also very rich.

She even owns a whole town — Hurricane Mills, in Tennessee. That's far from all. Being the uncrowned queen of country music is a financially rewarding position.

"I have a chain of western stores in Tennessee," she says. "A dude ranch. I own some of Memphis' electricity and Knoxville's water. Oh, Lordy, I can't remember what all."

Besides her home in Tennessee, Lynn has a "place" in Mexico, about 80 miles from Mazatlan. But she rarely sees either home. Most of her life is spent travelling around in her $200,000 bus, going from engagement to engagement.

The back part of the bus has been converted into a room for her, but most nights she sleeps in motels. She only sleeps in the bus when they have to travel at night to make the next engagement.

She's been doing this for years, averaging a few nights a month at home, the rest of the time out on the road. The pace is beginning to tell.

"I think," she says, "that I can only take it another two, three years. The pace is too much, being away from home and from my kids. I'd like to quit now, but I feel an obligation to keep at it some more."

There are, she explains, two obligations. One is to her fans, who want to see her in person. The other is to the people who booked her in her early years, when she was struggling up the country music ladder. They helped her when she needed help. She figures now, when she can return the favor, she owes them a debt.

Loretta Lynn . . . yearn for more book learnin'

So Lynn keeps on singing, keeps on travelling around in her bus, keeps on making millions. Strangely, she spends very little on herself.

"I deny myself things," she says. "I'll go into a dress shop with a girl, one of the back-up singers on my show. The girl will spend a lot of money on her gowns, but I'll buy the cheaper ones. The girl will buy $10 eyelashes and I'll buy $1.50 eyelashes.

"That's just the way I am. When you're dirt poor as a child, it comes hard to spend money later on, even when you have it."

But, she says, she denies her family nothing. She'll buy her husband, Doo, expensive gifts and the same for her children.

She tells the story of her impoverished childhood in graphic terms in her autobiography (with George Vecsey) called "Loretta Lynn: Coal Miner's Daughter."

She married at 14, quickly had the first four of her six children. At 16, she was picking strawberries in Washington state. And it was there, a few years later, that she first sang professionally — for $12.

"I had no education," sense but no book learning, I wish now that I had gone to school some more. I liked what little schooling I had."

Perhaps her biggest disappointment is that her children, who could have gone on to higher education, never did. She could have afforded to send them anywhere.

"I'm very disappointed in my kids," she says, "because of that. Only one of them — Cissy — finished high school. If I'd of had their chance, I would have studied. But when I was young, there was no high school in Butcher Holler — the nearest one was 12 miles away and there were no cars in Butcher Holler then."

She always sang, as a child, but never thought to turn professional until her husband pushed her into it. She likes all kinds of music, even opera, and believes maybe, if she'd grown up in another world, a world removed from Butcher Holler, she might have studied classical voice.

"I've sung duets with Roberta Peters of the Metropolitan Opera," she says. "We sang together at the Grand Ole Opry — she sang grand opera and I sang grand ole opry."

But country music is, of course, Lynn's first love. And she believes it is stronger now than it ever has been. It is spreading, too, she says.

"Me and Conway (Twitty) just broke a record in Washington, D.C.," she says. "And I was in a place in Pennsylvania and they had to turn people away. I've sung four times in Madison Square Garden in Manhattan and I always did well.

"And there are always teen-agers in the crowd, everywhere. I think today's kids like all kinds of music, not just rock. They're like me, in that. I enjoy music as long as it's good — country, rock, pop, opera."

Even though she's thinking of retiring, it's not from any disenchantment with singing. She enjoys singing as much today as she ever has.

"The only time I don't enjoy it," she says, "is when I have a cold and I know I won't be at my best.

"When you get to the top, it's hard. The folks always expect you to be the best. So I try and I'm disappointed when I'm not. I just can't understand people who get on drugs and sometimes can't even go on."

There's some talk of making a movie based on her book, a biographical film of her life.

"The fellows in my band tease me," she says. "They say that when they make that movie, my role ought to be played by Phyllis Diller."

Too accurate during World War Two

Farmer's Almanac true, wise

By GAYNOR MADDOX

The Old Farmer's Almanac is accurate about weather, wise about country philosophy and generally joyous about life. It was founded in 1792 and had George Washington and Abraham Lincoln as subscribers long ago. Today, the 1977 edition carries an ad "How To Make Money — Fast: Raise Fishworms, Crickets. 1000 Fishworms $7.95. Carter Farm, Plains, Georgia."

The first editor was Robert B. Thomas, a school teacher and farmer. His purpose was to advise farmers of weather conditions, meteoric conditions, movement of the tides and any oddities that might interest him. There were several other almanacs at the time. But Thomas with his system of cycles and rhythms made such accurate predictions that his fame grew and his magazine persists even into these harsh and technological times.

The Old Farmer's Almanac predicts the times of rising of the bright stars, the movements of the tides with alarming accuracy, the weather reports for months in advance and the movement of the planets. In fact it is so accurate that the Government stopped its publication for a time when it was learned during World War II that a German submarine trying to land on American soil had a copy of the Old Farmer's Almanac aboard. They used it for tide reports and weather.

Today's editor is Judson Hale, a Dartmouth graduate, who strives to keep the original spirit of the publication. He uses the same system of cycles and earth's rhythm regarding weather, and other astronomical systems regarding tides and stars. The results are remarkably accurate.

"The Almanac is unique, being America's oldest continuing publication," says Hale. "It has genuine historical value. I want to keep it lively and accurate and to pass it along to the next generation as it has been passed to our generation — a heritage of American life."

Besides the large number of astronomical calculations and the Farmer's Calendar, there are many bizarre and amusing articles. For example, the series of exchanges about "Hey, How Did This Mouse Ever Get Into My Bottle of True Brew Beer." Or the long and detailed articles on using dandelions for coffee, jelly, dandelion greens and wine. Very useful if your lawn is strewn with yellow dandelions. Also what's being done to save the stately elm and the spreading chestnut tree.

There are several such articles, plus a few jokes for the long winter evenings. Such as, in New York it is against the law to shoot at a hare from a trolley car in transit.

Outdoor activities are emphasized. For example: "Best Fishing Days 1977": Fishing is better when 1) the barometer is rising or high; 2) when the moon is between the new and the full; and 3) when the moon is in the astrological sign of Cancer, Pisces or Scorpio. If the barometer is high, too, good luck!"

"The best times for fishing are one hour before and after high tide, and one hour before and after low tide."

The Old Farmer's Almanac is published in Dublin, N.H. 03044 and is available at many newsstands. (NEA)

'I only need what I got'

There he is again. The old, saintly-looking man with the flowing white beard, the long hair, the determined gait.

Solemnly walking along West Broadway, he appears as if in a dream — emerging out of nowhere. As the cars flash past, he carries out his self- appointed mission of cleaning up the world, picking up bottles, cans, trash— the discarded debris of a generation that has passed him by.

We've all seen him, wondered about him, heard rumors about him. But who is he?

His name is James Arthur Litz and he'll be 77 this December. He usually speaks only when spoken to and sometimes not even then. People who don't know him are often suspicious of him; some have even warned their children to stay away from the man who is different and who doesn't seem to mind who notices.

But to those who know him, he is Jim, and these people both love and respect him for the way he is.

"One thing, I ain't got no boss tellin' me what to do," Jim says.

The people for whom he works would readily agree — they are a select group. Jim chooses them; they don't choose him.

"I clean up 10 to 15 houses," Jim says. "Used to have more than that...but we can't pick 'em up." (Jim always says "we" when talking about himself.) For reasons which only he knows, Jim will not "pick up" certain houses, and he confines his activities to the area near West Broadway from about Ohio to Highway 65.

What does Jim pick up..

Well, first of all, trash— trash by the truckloads. He usually carries a large bag with him on his daily rounds, filling it not only with the trash which he finds in his employers' yards, but also with the litter which the rest of the town unloads on the city streets, in its gutters, and on the Smith-Cotton High School grounds.

No one asks Jim to clean the city, and no one pays him for doing it. "I just do that to have something to do going in (to his regular, paying jobs) and going back," he says. "It's better to do something than nothing."

In addition, Jim does other odd jobs such as hedge-trimming, sidewalk- edging and raking. But, again, he has his own, dead-set rules of how things should be done. He won't use power-driven machinery, for instance, and there are certain kinds of weeds he won't pull.

Jim's typical day begins at 3:30 or 4 o'clock in the morning. He lives in a little motel room on the west side of town, and his first order of business is the mile or so walk to Mrs. Jerry Harlan's house at 820 West Broadway, where he eats breakfast. Jim prefers to walk everywhere he goes and will not ride in cars.

"He comes around here every day," Mrs. Harlan says. "The first thing I do when I come down in the morning is open the door and say, 'Good morning, Jim.'"

"We have a little shed" out back where Jim eats his breakfast, she says. "He has breakfast when it's light."

It's not that Mrs. Harlan won't let Jim eat inside. "He won't come inside," she says. Jim prefers to eat his breakfast in private,regardless of the weather. "He doesn't seem to mind the cold," Mrs. Harlan says.

When he is finished, Jim brings his tray to the back porch of Mrs. Harlan's house, sets it down, and begins the daily chores. Often, this consists of what Jim decides should be done, and he may start working long before anyone at the Harlan household arises.

Once his chores are finished there, it's on to the next house. Although Jim owns some tools, he also uses those of his employers.

"Sometimes he'll say, 'Mrs. Harlan, I want to take such and such a tool over to so-and-so's house,'" to which Mrs. Harlan always agrees.

His next stop might be at Mrs. Clyde Heynen's place, at 1109 West Seventh. "He does a wonderful job of cleaning up," she says. "He's as good as gold...I can't remember when he ever first started working here; I'm just glad he comes."

And so it goes, on throughout the day. Jim will eat lunch at someone else's house, perhaps. No one ever seems to plan his meals in advance, yet he always eats somewhere.

People usually give Jim a few dollars for his services, but there is no set rate. "He never tells you what he wants" in the way of wages, Mrs. Heynen says. Most of Jim's other employers agree.

Besides trash and leaves, Jim also picks up other things. He has a habit of saving what others throw away. In his 8-by-15 foot motel room, stored alongside his saws and pruning shears, are the fruits of this extra labor: wrenches, cups, saucers, shoes, boxes, baskets, mounds of clothing, wood planks, and a stuffed koala bear, all of which are piled up to the ceiling leaving only enough space for his small, narrow bed.

Jim's present living quarters, as unorthodox as they may seem, cannot compare to times past.

"I've stayed in straw stacks, along the railroad tracks, under bridges and culverts," he says. "I stayed down under Flat Creek bridge" back in 1962 until the sheriff came along and picked him up. "They took me over to Fulton (at the State Mental Hospital) for 10 or 11 months," Jim says.

According to sheriff's department reports, the state felt Jim was not taking adequate care of himself. Jim feels otherwise. "What I told 'em," he says, "they should put the 'attendants' in for the patients and the patients in for the 'attendants.'"

After about a year of making billfolds and baby's cradles, it was determined that Jim could indeed take care of himself, and he was free to go.

Perhaps Jim's problem was he refused to conform to other people's standards. For one thing, he likes to move around. Jim says he's visited about 30 states in this country by train.

Perhaps people also worry about Jim because he looks different. Jim moved into the Bothwell Hotel around 1959, he says, and stayed there for a few years. At that time, he was clean-shaven and dressed more according to fashion, says Don Sands, a hotel clerk who remembers him then.

It was only after Jim left the hotel that he began cleaning up for people and letting his beard and hair grow. "I've had a beard before and cut 'em off," Jim says, but there's no use shaving. "By God, if I took this one off, another'd come out."

Jim came to the hotel after living out west in Portland, Ore., where "we were working at night sacking charcoal briquets." While on the job, he was involved in an industrial accident and received a settlement for his injuries, from which he payed his rent at the Sedalia hotel. When the money from the settlement ran out, Jim had to leave. He's been cleaning up ever since.

Jim was born in Decatur, Ill., and moved here with his mother, father, and four brothers early in life. At age 26 he went to work for the Paul family, living on a farm near the Flat Creek Inn southwest of town. Jim stayed there for 17 years before going into the Army in 1942.

"He was one of the best workers that I'd ever seen," says 75-year-old Roy Paul. Paul rarely sees Jim anymore these days, he says.

Another of Jim's early friends, Walter Dexheimer, Route 1, was not aware that Jim was still alive. "He and I worked side-by-side," Dexheimer recalls. "He was an upstanding, big man." Around 1940, Dexheimer lost track of his friend. "I supposed Jim had just passed away."

His friends fading into the background, Jim seems to measure everything these days in terms of time long since passed. Looking out over the western reaches of the city, he tells of the farmland now occupied by the encroaching city. "You can't put the old with the new," he says.

"In the old days, we could get along," Jim says. "We're going to have to go back to the old way."

And yet, he keeps up his daily routine without complaint, wanting nothing more than to keep things looking nice.

Some people say that Jim is secretly "rich." The major part of his monthly income is from Social Security and the Veteran's Administration. The checks amount to $259.82 — most of that pays his rent, with the rest going straight into the bank.

The truth is, Jim has probably the only thing in life he ever felt he really needed — his independence.

"Mr. Harlan asked me one day," Jim says, "'Do you need anything?'"

"I said, 'No, by God, 'I only need what I got.'"

Moving day for Katy depot

The old Missouri-Kansas-Texas (Katy) railroad depot in St. Charles, Mo., begins a 200-foot journey to a new site in the city's riverfront area. The station, built nearly a century ago, will be restored. It was abandoned by the railroad in 1958.

Six persons arrested in raid

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Six persons were arrested Friday in an early morning drug raid that culminated a year-long investigation into narcotics sales at Missouri Western State College, police said.

Five of those arrested were arraigned on various charges in Buchanan County Magistrate Court, while the sixth was scheduled for arraignment today.

Police were still searching late Friday night for nine more persons named in a warrant Thursday.

Officers from the Missouri Highway Patrol, Buchanan County Sheriff's Department and local police launched the raid about 6:30 a.m., confiscating an undetermined amount of drugs.

Emma K. Johnston, 32, of St. Joseph, was charged with sale of amphetamines. Arraigned on a charges of selling marijuana were Everett B. Jonas, 22; Jimmy J. Musalek, 25; Barbara S. Hanasik, 25, and Susan Clause, 22, all of St. Joseph.

Execution rendition

This is an artist's rendition of how Gary Gilmore's execution will take place if tradition is followed. The five riflemen, one with a blank shell, fire through slits in a canvas sheet at a white target placed by a doctor over the condemned man's heart. He is hooded and strapped to a wooden chair. The sun will have risen but lights are provided. Witnesses can include two clergymen and up to five family or friends.

(UPI)

A profile of Gary Gilmore

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gary Mark Gilmore, whose first brush with the law was for breaking windows at age 14, says he believes God will give him "higher standing" because he refuses to fight a death sentence for murder.

Gilmore, 35, has protested delays in his sentence to die before a firing squad for killing a motel clerk during a robbery. The state Board of Pardons will consider his case on Wednesday.

Lt. E.S. Fagan, maximum security supervisor at the Utah State Prison, said that Gilmore thinks he will "be leaving" soon

Gilmore was raised as a Catholic by his father, who died 14 years ago, and was taught Mormon beliefs by his mother.

She said in a recent interview that her son changed greatly during the 1½ years he spent in an Oregon reformatory after he was caught breaking windows. According to his mother, who is bed-ridden with arthritis in Portland, Ore., Gilmore seemed more belligerent after his release.

Since then, Gilmore has spent more than 16 years in penal institutions, including time for assault and robbery. He was sent to a federal penitentiary in Illinois for 1½ years because he escaped twice from work-and school-release programs.

His girl friend, Nichole Barrett, described him in an interview with local television station KSL-TV as a "beautiful person" whom prison made "bitter and ugly inside."

A different assessment comes from Bob Watson, director of corrections in Oregon, who said Gilmore "gave us trouble from the very beginning.

"He was sort of a loner and hard to get along with. He was disruptive, but not as part of any group."

Gilmore was paroled from Illinois to Utah last April with the provision that his reatives help him. His mother was reared in the Provo area of Utah.

Gilmore's uncle by marriage, Vern Damico of Provo, said the relatives tried.

Mrs Barrett agreed that her leaving Gilmore to return to a former husband played a role in his being charged with murder.

Both Damico and Mrs. Barrett said drinking also may have been partly responsible. Gilmore has ordered a six-pack of beer as his last heal before execution.

Convention roles for 3

Three local residents will participate in the Missouri Hospital Association convention this week at Tan-Tar-A Resort at Osage Beach.

Harold L. Vestal, chief engineer at Bothwell Hospital, is in charge of two programs Monday, "Energy Management" and an "Update on Electrical Technology for Hospitals." Vestal is president of the Missouri Society of Hospital Engineers, one of 11 health-related organizations holding educational meetings during the convention.

Two members of the State Fair Community College faculty will conduct communications workshops Tuesday for members of the Missouri State Association of Licensed Practical Nurses. The two lecturers will be Amy Young, chairperson of health occupations education, and Florence McGuire, instructor-coordinator of secondary health occupations.

More than 1,000 representatives from the state's 150 hospitals are expected to attend the convention, which runs Monday through Wednesday.

Quebec separatists riding upsurge of support to polls

By SERGE SCHMEMANN
Associated Press Writer

MONTREAL, Quebec (AP) — The Quebec separatist movement, once viewed as a minority of dissaffected intellectuals and bomb-hurling radicals, is expected to make dramatic gains in provincial elections Monday.

Party leader Rene Levesque has pledged that if he wins, he will put the question of the independence of French-speaking Quebec to a referendum.

The upsurge of support for his party, however, is not a sudden swelling of independence fever. Opinion polls indicate that only about 20 per cent of the voters are diehard separatists, and Levesque's espousal of the cause may be his major weakness.

His strength in the polls is seen as the result of widespread frustration with a rash of crippling strikes, high unemployment and inflation, the province's billion-dollar debt from the Olympics last summer, alleged government corruption and bitter French-English rivalries.

"Things can't go on like this any more!" is Levesque's pitch to the voters as he calls for the ouster of Premier Robert Bourassa's six-year-old Liberal government.

On the defensive, Bourassa paints Levesque as a dangerous secessionist who would break up the Canadian federation, lose Quebec $1.5 billion in revenue from the federal government and destroy the province's economy.

"No to the Separatists!" say the signs on Montreal buses over a picture of Bourassa, a bespectacled, 43-year-old economist. "Only we can do it."

Many observers regard Levesque's promise of an independence referendum as a device to satisfy the apparent majority of French Canadians who favor continued union with Canada's nine other predominantly English-speaking provinces. Since the polls indicate the referendum would go against separatism, political success on Monday might force the separatists to shelve or even abandon their fundamental cause.

Most political observers believe that Bourassa's Liberals, who now hold 97 of the 110 seats in the provincial assembly, will manage to retain a majority and stay in office. But they may not.

In the last elections, in 1973, the Quebec party won only six assembly seats but they got 31 per cent of the vote.

The Liberals won 54 per cent of the vote, but their popularity has been slipping badly. Most commentators say Bourassa called the elections because his support was eroding so rapidly he felt waiting until his five-year term was up would mean certain defeat.

For Quebec's non-French minority — the old-line English living in Montreal's elegant Westmount district and the new wave of immigrants from the European continent and the Middle East — the choice is a hard one. Their fear of separatism is matched by antagonism toward Bourassa, and they are threatening to spread their votes among a parcel of splinter parties.

The English and the immigrants comprise almost 20 per cent of Quebec's 6.2 million residents, and they could swing the vote in at least 11 of the 110 assembly districts. Their possible defection clearly worries the Liberals.

English is the mother tongue of about 60 per cent of Canada's 22.8 million people and French that of about 27 per cent. The rest speak various European languages. About 80 per cent of the French Canadians live in Quebec, the largest province in area and the second after Ontario in population.

New Wonder record nation's favorite

By STAN MIESES

It's only been a few weeks, but Stevie Wonder's double-record "Songs in the Key of Life" has zoomed past all the other hot properties on the charts, including Peter Frampton's, and is easily the nation's favorite disk. Two years have passed since Stevie's last album, and the countless postponements of this release have whetted a voracious appetite: the $11.98 list record shipped "platinum," and to date more than 1.4 million copies have been sold.

In the two years, we've heard a number of Stevie Wonder imitators gain inflated status on the charts with their derivative sound, but Stevie's current domination of the record-buying public and the radio airwaves is testimony that his sincerity and lyrical strength cannot be matched.

"Actually," Stevie told us, "this album is not so much 'Stevie Wonder' as it is Steveland Morris — that's my real name. 'Stevie Wonder' is only a vehicle to say what I feel."

"Songs In The Key Of Life" is certainly the most ambitious recording he's attempted to date: it contains 17 new compositions on two long playing records plus four on an extended play single, and a fat lyric booklet that's meant to be studied.

He has continued down the road of self-exploration, which he so eloquently began on "Innervisions," released in 1974, and in "Songs" he has reached a power and range that's universally impressive. His stylistic dexterity is singular in pop music. He can play jazz, hard r&j Spanish, gospel and rock and roll. He threads them together on "Songs" under his heading of "love mentalism."

"There's a feeling in these songs I wish to express to the world, and that is: this is where I am, and there's no looking back," he said. "It took me a long time to complete this record, I know, but I don't care. I gave it my all. I needed the time to find the picture I wanted to paint. I waited until I was satisfied." Motown, his recording company, must be breathing lightly these days too. This is Stevie's first release on his new $13 million contract, now two years old. It looks as if its sales will make up for lost time.

But indeed, more importantantly, it has brought Stevie Wonder back to an adoring public, a following unique in pop music in that it's pretty equally divided between whites and blacks. Stevie's approach in "Songs" is less mystical and more personal, and even the most difficult themes have become empathetic rallying points for millions of fans in a few short weeks. This isn't light stuff either: "Have A Talk with God" and "Ordinary Pain" deal with the need for self-confession; "As" and "Another Star" are joyous confessions of love. "Village Ghetto Land" is a powerful follow-up to "Living in the City" (from "Fulfillingness' First Finale," his last release) and "Past Time Paradise" calls attention for all of us to "be here now." These, and a rousing tribute to "Sir Duke" (Ellington) are easy favorites, and there's more where they came from. It's that kind of record. It's bound to hit somebody, someplace.

"What I'm singing about, like in 'Ordinary Pain,' is — 'Don't fool yourself and tell no one else. That's an obvious pain. But it's more than an ordinary pain in your heart.' These things have happened to me. They happen to others.

"Whether we meet or not, I hope my love mentalism will spread throughout the world," he said. Stevie Wonder talks like that. "Will people take this as seriously as I do? Time cures all those things. In time, they will listen, and maybe, hear. I have no guarantee that in my lifetime I'll be understood. But I won't wait for that.

"When I say I won't wait, I mean, there is no past, there is no future, there is no time. My record is about feelings."

The Swedish rock and roll group, Abba, dropped into town this week, and we got a chance to get the Scandinavian perspective on the scene. Abba has never performed in the United States, but despite that, they have still managed five or six big AM hits and a decent Best Hits album — and their faces are still not known. Shame. Good faces in this group. High cheekbones and firm jaws, big eyes and wide mouths. The two women, Anni-Frid (Frida) and Agnetha (Anna) are perfect Nordic types. They're all married — Frida to Benny and Anna to Bjorn. Why don't they come and play in the U.S.? They speak perfect English, (they're very popular in England) — so why don't they play here? Benny told us simply: "In Sweden we are number one. In England we are number one. If we came here now, we would not be number one. We can afford to wait." He leaned back in the limousine, and looked through the sunlight roof. "You know, New Yorkers never look up," he said, surveying the skyscraper scenery. "Do you mind if I do?"

Eastern Europe an experience for Ionia couple

By RON JENNINGS
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

It wasn't so much the embalmed body of Lenin, the suffocating military surveillance in Red Square or even the medieval-ish government farms that marveled John and Jenna Lee Ficken, Ionia, on their recent three-week People-to-People trip to Europe and behind the Iron Curtain — they'd been led to expect all these things.

What really surprised them were the smaller, more incidental things — such the presence of a tiny union pin proudly worn by a Russian ruralist, how to properly heft a Bavarian beer mug and the reticent resident of Kharkov, Russia, pleading for peace and a stick of gum in the same broken-English sentence.

"Nobody hardly talked to us at all when we were in Kharkov," said Ficken, who with his wife was selected for the tour last January because of their outstanding agricultural and community service activities. "At first we just thought they were all shy because our group was from the United States. But then we realized later they were not supposed to be communicating very much with us.

"We'd just about given up hope of really getting to meet any of the regular commonfolk, so to speak," he continued. "Then, all of a sudden, this man came up and said, 'tell your people our people want peace, friendship and mutual trade.' Then, he went ahead and asked for some gum without even pausing for breath."

During their scenic sojourn, the Benton County couple toured sections of Switzerland, Germany, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union. For Ficken, a purebred Yorkshire hog breeder and president of the Missouri Tractor Pullers Association, his East-European excursion was a golden opportunity to engage in a little down-home diplomacy.

"There were about 30 in our group and we brought over a boxful of Farm Bureau caps and some ball point pens," he explained. "The Russian farmers were glad to get these little things and they really appreciated them. It was fun for us to give them out and to visit with them because that was when we really got into what People-to-People is really all about."

When one of the Russian field hands offered to exchange his worker's union button for a ballpoint pen, Ficken first learned that Communist workers do have a few rudimentary rights.

"I discovered that, through their union, they could request the government to assign them a different farm work leader, they could request the government to crack down on their fellow laborers who aren't pulling their fair share of the load and they can also ask for additional education for their children," Ficken said. "Most of the time, they say, the government is responsive to these complaints and checks them out. I know these don't sound like too many privileges to most Americans but, compared to what I had thought all along, the Russians have it just a little better than I thought they did."

An unforgetable visit

Attired in an authentic European peasant dress and apron, Jenna Lee Ficken holds a somewhat-similarly dressed doll which she purchased on a recent trip to Europe and several Communist countries. Her husband, John, is wearing a furry Russian winter hat and Bavarian tie.

The Russian farmers were mystified, Ficken said, when he showed them pictures of his special prized pulling tractor in action, with every part straining and thick blue fumes billowing profusely.

"Judging by what they saw in the picture, with all that exhaust floating around, they thought I had a very poor machine," Ficken chuckled. "I tried to explain to them that this was a specially-rigged pulling tractor, not a regular field one. I also tried to explain exactly what a pullin' contest is, but I don't know to this day if they really understood it all!"

Ficken had a few questions of his own regarding rural Russian machinery. When he toured the various Soviet technology exhibits in the Kremlin, he viewed shining versions of ultra-modern agrarian equipment. Yet, in the fields and furrows of the Russian farm belt, he saw only pre-detente plows, patched-up tractors and other restored relics of the past.

"I'd sure like to know if they just have all the new stuff in the museums or if they actually are using any of it where it can do any good," he said. "I thought about that over there and I still think about it now and then. It seems to me that, maybe, what I saw in Moscow was just a lot of propaganda."

While in the Soviet capitol city, the Fickens viewed a breath-taking presentation of the classic "Swan Lake" ballet. They also took the time to learn that apartments in are assigned by the government according to family-size. Unlike the United States, Mrs. Ficken noted, the Soviets promote a burgeoning birthrate.

"The best and largest apartments go to the larger-families," she explained. "Grandparents stay with the children and there are also government-supported day care centers so that mothers may work. Also, bachelors over there are charged a special heavy tax. They really can't afford to stay single for long."

In Communist Yugoslavia, Ficken said, the citizens seemed "much more relaxed and friendly than in Russia and the other countries that have more rigid, stricter communism." Perhaps the most noticeable difference, he indicated, was the absence of armed guards.

"I never saw a single soldier in Yugoslavia," Ficken stated. "But, of course, the government was still in control pretty much. No farmer may own more than 25 acres, which naturally cuts down on the type of operation he can have. I mean, how can you afford expensive equipment when you're only working 25 acres?

"I know they don't need a lot of fancy machines to farm just 25 acres, but, goodness, they're still using oxen. They simply forced to farm primitive-like, they haven't got any choice."

Mr. and Mrs. Ficken also viewed Free World farming — Switzerland-style. In the land of the Alps, they saw very few fenced pastures. Dairy herds, which freely intermingled, were separated by bells instead of barbed wire and branding.

"Each herd had its own special bell so an owner could tell by the sound in an instant which cow was his and which wasn't," Mrs. Ficken explained. This close cattle camaraderie, she added, scarcely can be avoided in Switzerland because the average homestead is only 20-some acres.

Because of their comparatively tiny farms, some Swiss dairymen have formed cooperatives and, in at least one area, are ahead of their U.S. counterparts, Ficken noted.

"They have come up with a technique of pasteurization where they can leave milk out on unrefrigerated shelves for months at a time and it does not spoil," he explained. "I understand our government hasn't bought this idea completely. But, they're sure making a go of it over there.

Mrs. Ficken also made sure she didn't neglect another important aspect of the Swiss economy — watch-making. She purchased eight time pieces, one for she and her husband and each of their six children and "probably really boosted their whole economy," she laughed.

In describing their German experiences, Ficken recalled his Munich mug-handling miscue with relish.

"I didn't even think hardly anything about it," he said with a hearty chuckle. "I just knew I was thirsty and looking forward to sampling some of that fancy German beer I'd heard so much about. I just grabbed the handle with my fingers real tight and bent my old elbow like I would back home. Then, all of a sudden-like, why you never heard such carryings on!"

To his chagrin, Ficken immediately marked himself as a fumbling foreigner. The "korrekt" way to clasp the cavernous drinking vessel, he was promptly shown, is to slip your fingers between the handle and side, cock your thumb opposite your finger, press the back of your hand against the handle and squeeze the stein.

The revelry ended dramatically when their group stepped onto Communist soil for the first time, in Czechoslovakia, Mrs. Ficken said.

"The soliders were everywhere and nobody, not even the civilians, wanted to talk with you or at least were supposed to visit," she added. "But we went ahead and did something we were told not to do. We managed to get some of them aside, away from the security, and get a chance to visit. When they thought nobody was watching, why'd they really wanted to talk. Most of all, they wanted to know more about what was going on in the United States."

One particular incident the Fickens recalled vividly.

"I was standing on a bus in Czech and an elderly lady was looking in the opposite direction away from me," Ficken said. "Then she noticed my People-to-People badge, I guess, and she suddenly began whispering to me but kept her eyes straight ahead to avoid suspicion.

"She asked me if I was an American. I told her I was and then she started sobbing. She said, 'In 1968, just before Russians come in again, my son go to America. I miss him so much, but I so happy he is there in that wonderful country, you know?'"

Ficken did know — then, better than ever before.

'Skip' signals saving lives far away

By Ink Dipper

CBers are saving the lives of people hundreds of miles away, thanks to "skip," a phenomenon caused when radio signals bounce off the earth's atmosphere.

The Federal Communications Commission has a regulation prohibiting CBers from talking to anyone more than 150 miles away. But it has taken no action against people involved in these long-distance rescues.

Skip fluctuates during the year, usually peaking in the summer months when the atmosphere picks up extra energy and becomes reflective.

But skip can also be caused by sunspots, eruptions on the sun's surface which grow more intense every 11 years. The sunspots shoot out extra ultraviolet rays, charging the atmosphere with more energy and making it reflective.

Sunspot activity is just around the corner. The high activity, which will last three to five years, starts in 1978 and will probably peak in the early 1980s.

More people in trouble will be relying on skip to contact emergency aid.

One of the most dramatic skip-related rescues came recently when a group of North Carolina CBers monitored a distress call from a sinking pleasure boat in the Bahamas.

The boat, with four persons aboard, was going down fast when Jocelyn "White Widow" Goodwin picked up the call. She and other CBers, sometimes straining to understand the weak signal, were able to relay the information, via telephone, to the U.S. Coast Guard. The Coast Guard was able to save all aboard the boat.

Skip signals often crowd out local communications, and some CBers will find themselves unable in emergencies to contact nearby CBers. They will be forced to "shoot skip," as it is called by CBers, and make contact with a distant person who can relay the message to the proper authorities.

A CBer, before he shoots skip in an emergency, should ask himself if the end justifies the means. Is the situation dire enough to justify breaking the law and bothering people hundreds of miles away?

A flat tire on the interstate wouldn't qualify, but an automobile wreck — with injuries — would if there was no other way to send for help.

CBers shooting skip in emergencies should forget everything they know about 10-codes and slang expressions. Both vary from state-to-state and even county-to-county, so a person six states away might use different codes and slang.

Skip signals are fickle, so messages should be short and clear, giving the nature of the emergency, location, extent of any injuries and who to telephone for help.

The police in the nearest town are usually the best people to suggest for sending help. Even though the emergency may be out of their jurisdiction, the police would know to whom the message should be routed.

Like any other call for help, a skip call should be made on channel nine, the emergency channel. If no one can be raised on channel nine, other frequencies might be tried, but with frequent rotation back to nine. People trained in handling emergency calls monitor channel nine from Maine to California, so no matter where a skip signal falls, there's a better chance on channel nine of finding someone who knows what he or she is doing.

Skip should always be a last resort. Try to contact someone locally so the message can be relayed by a person familiar with the geography and who to call in emergencies.

Constantly punching away on skip might break through to a local CBer, and no matter how weak his signal is, he's still a better bet than skip.

Washing dress risky business

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — I was interested in Mrs. F.M.'s letter about the wedding dress. My daughter was married in my 27-year-old wedding dress that had spots and stains on it. As crazy as this sounds I put it through the washer on the gentle cycle, with regular soap suds and, believe it or not, added a bit of bleach. I put it in the dryer and it comes out beautifully, even though it had tiny covered buttons all the way down the back. This dress is a very heavy satin. After it was washed, I ironed it on the wrong side with a warm but not hot iron. — MRS. J.H.R.

DEAR READERS — Mrs. J.H.R.'s letter certainly shows a lot of courage, but we do not recommend that all of you with old wedding gowns run out and wash them. When her dress was made, satin was different from today's satin. It might wash, but more likely a new satin dress would not. There might be some fabrics that would take to gentle washing after a careful testing. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is an oldie but I think it bears repeating. When you take clothes or linens out of the dryer, do any mending they may need before putting them away. I do this while watching television. It keeps me from eating.

I keep my dishwasher powder from getting lumpy by keeping it between the stove and the kitchen wall where it is warm.

Keeping up with belts used to be the bane of my life. I put tiny one-inch-long nails on the board in my closet to take care of the little narrow belts. The wide ones are loosely rolled and put in a drawer. The self fabric ones that match garments are hung on the hangers with the right clothes. — MRS. R.B.H.

Polly will send you one of her "peachy" thank-you cards, ideal for framing or placing in your family scrapbook, if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

For a fall dessert serve toasted walnuts with port — the ruby or tawny variety. But remember that port should be served at room temperature.

A layer cake covered with a fluffy white frosting looks particularly inviting when chocolate shot is sprinkled over the icing.

Her dreams

It is strange as we older grow
How our minds will sometimes wander
To those we loved as children
In the days way back yonder,
Sometimes it is in memories
And other times it is dreams
So very, very vivid
It must be real it seems.
A friend of mine recently
Told of the dreams she had
At the time she was quite ill
About her old granddad.
She hadn't thought of him in years
For she was only five
When he died, but in her dreams
She saw him very much alive,
He wore a beard, 'twas neat and trim,
Not white but a nice gray,
A man of deep religious faith,
She could almost hear him pray.
His blessings at the table
Were reverend in tone,
He used no set ritual,
His words were all his own.
In her dreams she saw his home again,
The valley and the pond below
Where people of the little church
For baptism used to go.
She saw the large room with two beds
Off of which was a dressing room
It was a little smaller
Where people went to dress and groom,
How very, very long ago
When she was just a child
She loved him and now in illness
In her dreams again he smiled.
Not once did she dream of him
But often when so ill
And she wondered, now she needed him,
Was he watching over her still?
Had he come back to give her faith
In her trouble now to carry on?
This kindly, dear old gentleman
Who had so many years been gone.
Some don't believe, but I do,
That our loved ones see and care
And when the dark hours come to us
We know when they are there.
They may not know our happy times
But God's vigil does not end
So back to us when we're in need
Our loved ones does he send.

Muenks-Kliethermes

LOOSE CREEK, Mo. — At home in Bunceton are the former Miss Diane Marie Muenks and Gary Michael Kliethermes following their noon wedding Nov. 6 at Immaculate Conception Church here.

The Rev. Kevin Gormley and the Rev. Patrick McMyler performed the double ring ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Kever, Bonnots Mill, Mo., and the late Gerald G. ## Prepare the bird, eat it too

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — During the coming holidays the harried homemaker can prepare the bird and eat it too, claims Michigan State University foods specialist Marilyn Mook.

By beginning a few days early the cook can relax and enjoy the meal along with the guests.

Begin by defrosting the turkey, chopping the bread for dressing and making and freezing the rolls. The day before mix the dry ingredients for dressing, make and roll out the pie dough and cook the potatoes.

On the holiday morning bake the pie, prepare the stuffing and begin roasting the turkey. Make the salad and refrigerate it in a plastic bag and cook the sweet potatoes.

At the last minute heat the rolls, mash the potatoes, make the gravy, carve the turkey and smile.

Dennis Smith portrays Clemens in the play. Supporting roles are played by the playwright and by Mary Burge.

Age battle

Any oily substance, salad oil, bath oil, petroleum jelly, is effective in preventing the evaporation of fluid from the skin. This helps control dryness and cuts down on the aging appearance of your skin.

Diet wisely

Crash dieting effects the appearance of your skin and can contribute to wrinkling of the skin. If you must diet or merely feel you want to lose a few pounds, cut down on caloric intake to lose weight slowly.

Color it right

Doff boots

Rubber boots have a tendency to make many persons' feet swell. Try not to wear them all day.

Government runs without people

By CYRENE DEAR

WASHINGTON — The wonderful thing about America is that the government goes on even if the President, the Congress and the President-elect are not in residence. The Monday morning quarterbacks of the press have been busy evaluating the election and discussing, "What is Carter going to do?"

The consensus is that the important issues of the campaign were the economy, inflation and unemployment. There were many promises but few answers. The answers are still President Ford's until Jan. 20, then they are all dumped in Jimmy Carter's lap.

Some of the Carter promises are already coming home to roost. Labor is hot on his trail — wants to be reimbursed with a cabinet post, or other recognition for the support they gave him. The blacks will want a job for Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga, whose personality and ability would justify a good appointment, and many others who went down the line to elect the first president from the South since Zachary Taylor.

Carter made a commitment that businessmen will recall even though it was like the fine print in an insurance policy. He said that he hoped to hold federal spending down to between 20 and 21 per cent of the gross national product. That is about the same as it has been for several years. He tactfully used this figure to avoid the criticism that the Democrats are noted for reckless spending.

Transition is in the works. President Ford through his staff has given Jack Watson, a lawyer from Atlanta who is Carter's man for a peaceful transition, a blueprint to follow. Carter is counting on Sen. Mondale, his vice president-elect, to help on this. Fortunately the two are friends as well as a political team, and Mondale should be able to hold Carter down if he gets too possessed with his power. Mondale knows Washington and especially the politics on the Hill, so his opinions should be valuable.

If Jimmy Carter keeps his promise that his daughter Amy will go to public school, it might be Stevens on 21st and L, the nearest to the White House. Since it is only around the corner from my apartment, I may stumble over the Secret Service every morning on my way to the bus.

Sen. Stuart Symington gave a serious warning in his swan song press conference when he quoted five experts from Harvard and MIT who said that a nuclear war before the end of this century is "not only possible but probable." The senator was the first secretary of the Air Force in 1947-1950.

"We are talking about more annihilation unless somebody can prevent it," the senator said. He added that changing times call for changing policies, and that nuclear weapons are now in the hands of many other countries as well as the United States. It is frightening to know that there are many leaders who could push that button. The senator's swan song was not a melody from Tchaikovsky, but some very frightening words.

By RON JENNINGS
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

Call him a cavalier cattleman, the blithe spirit of the beef world or simply a happy-go-lucky steer studier.

In any case, it's obvious that 23-year-old Lochart R.S. Ainslie is not your ordinary run-of-the-ranch livestock man. Nearly half a world away from his 12,000-acre home spread near Bedford, South Africa, Ainslie has spent the last year hop-scotching the world, observing various cattle operations and evaluating the results of cross-breeding experiments which are being conducted around the globe.

Ainslie brought his few belongings and semi-British accent to Sedalia Friday courtesy of local cattle buyer LaRue Sauers, who met him Thursday night at the American Royal in Kansas City. At the Royal, Ainslie said, he was particularly impressed by the Chianina cattle breed.

"This is originally a French breed," he explained. "They have lots of growth potential and height and an unusually strong resistence to heat and insects. This is important back home because we have a lot of ticks."

plain old Herefords, Shorthorns seem miles away. Instead, the discussion centers on Simmental, Pinzgauer, Afrikander and other exotics. Most of these breeds, he explained, are now being cross-bred with other more-familiar strains in the hopes of producing hardier, meatier varieties. In the sophisticated international climate of top-rank cattle breeding, the possibilities are seemingly unlimited, Ainslie said.

Almost as endless, he might have added, as the chances for adventure on a cruise around the world.

After leaving his home ranch, which has been run by six generations of Ainslies since 1827, Lochart journeyed first by ship to Australia, where he stayed six months, and then on to New Zealand for 12 more weeks.

Since he came to the United States last August, Ainsilies has visited California, Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas and Missouri.

Ainslie's key impressions of American cattle-breeding customs have centered around the mechanized feed lot operations which can serve up to 2,000 cattle at a time.

"When it comes to technology and mechanized machinery, America can't be beat, that's for sure," he claims. "That's whats fixed on my mind the most. I've always been told the United States is the top technological nation in the world, but you never quite fathom it all until you see for yourself."

Although he has been the guests of numerous cattlemen across this country, Ainslie always tries to find cattle-connected employment when staying any where very long.

"I like to get the feel and flavor of it all, you know?" he stated. "I'm beginning to feel like a genuine American cowboy!"

Before he returns to his 130-year old home, which has one of the few remaining workable water-powered mills in South Africa, Ainslie plans to visit Great Britian, the spawning grounds of many of the world's foremost and familiar cattle breeds.

"I've still got a ways to go before I head back for home," he explained. "I plan to spend a great deal of time in England because there is a lot there for me to observe and participate in."

He also plans to spend a while in Scotland, where for the first time he will delve into human, as well as cattle, genealogy — his family emigrated to South African from this country in the early 19th century.

Throughout his globe-girdling odyssey, Ainslie has kept in touch with his own country as much from newspaper headlines as through letters from home. Since he left 12 months ago, neighboring Rhodesia has taken the first tentative steps toward black majority rule. There is even talk in South Africa of a relaxing of apartheid.

Ainslie's view on all this?

"First of all, I'm a rancher, not a politician," Ainslie stated. "But, personally I don't think it's going to work at all. I don't think the Blacks and the Indians are ready for it. But, as I said, I will be busy farming in my country first and foremost. The political developments are not so much my concern."

'Stop ERA' head says attempt to fail

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The newly-elected Missouri legislature will defeat the Equal Rights Amendment if that proposal is again considered next session, according to Ann McGraw, chairman of the Missouri Stop ERA organization.

"As far as I can see, we can defeat ERA in both the House and Senate," the St. Louis County woman said, as about 65 of the group's members attended a government action seminar here Friday.

Mrs. McGraw said a new advantage for the opponents of the proposal lies in the fact that Gov. and Mrs. Christophers S. Bond will no longer be lobbying for the measure from the governor's mansion. Bond, a strong ERA supporter, was defeated in a re-election bid Nov. 2.

Another powerful ERA proponent, Senate President Pro Tem William Cason, will not be a member of the legislature when it meets in January. Mrs. McGraw said she had not been able to determine how Gov.Elect Joseph P. Teasdale stood on ERA.

The proposal has been brought before the General Assembly in the past, but did not get to a vote before both chambers until last session, when it was narrowly approved in the House and defeated in the Senate.

Elaine Donnelly, Michigan Stop ERA chairwoman was the featured speaker at the Missouri group's dinner. During a news conference she said Missouri was on of the key states in the anti-ERA battle.

She said national approval of the women's rights amendment would amount to increased government interference in family life. She said that none of those supporting the amendment has ever been able to point out laws which are discriminatory to women.

"The Equal Rights Amendment is destructive because it would end up taking away the rights of women," Mrs. Donnelly said.

Democratic Congresswoman Leonor Sullivan of St. Louis was honored by the group as being a "foremost ERA opponent, whose long and distinguished career dates back to the days when women did not enjoy some of the legal protections they now have."

Mrs. Sullivan was unable to attend the dinner.

Tarkio family honored

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The 1976 American Royal Missouri farm family is a father-son farming partnership in Tarkio, Mo., with seven family members operating a 1,560-acre grain and beef farm.

The Charles T. Hurst and Charles L. Hurst families will be recognized as the Missouri farm family for 1976 at the American Royal 4-H dinner Monday.

Charles T. Hurst, senior member of the partnership, has been farming in the Tarkio area all of his life. He and his son, Charles L. Hurst, own 1,-140 acres and rent 420 acres, about 40 per cent on the Tarkio River bottoms.

The younger Hurst, a 1956 graduate of the University of Missouri college of agriculture, returned to farming after a tour of duty with the Air Force.

Graffiti who-done-it baffles Soviet

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — A great graffiti mystery seems to have Leningrad's secret police (the KGB) and its dissident community baffled.

According to dissidents, on the night of Aug. 4-5, a slogan was painted on the Peter-Paul Fortress in letters about three feet high in a sentence that ran 100 to 150 feet long. It said: "You are strangling freedom but the soul of the people knows no bondage."

The slogan in white, oil-based paint could be seen high on the wall of the ancient landmark from up and down the Neva River waterfront.

Other accounts said the same slogan was scrawled later in lipstick on a major department store, on KGB headquarters itself and even on a couple of police cars.

Although the KGB obtained two "confessions" to part of the night's work, dissidents assert that these cannot be genuine. They insist they have no idea who the real culprits are.

The dissidents say the secret police were pressured into finding a scapegoat by public statements of Grigory V. Romanov, first secretary of the Leningrad region Communist party, in a speech on Sept. 24.

In that address, Romanov, speaking about dissidents, referred publicly to the slogans, and said the culprits had been apprehended.

The dissidents say it was only after that speech that the KGB managed to obtain "confessions" from two unofficial artists, who still are being held.

Said Andrei Rukhin, a Jewish activist, "It seems somewhat ridiculous to think they did it. Those letters were very big. There had to be more than two people."

Officials quickly painted over the slogan, but the effect was unsatisifactory, so they sandblasted it off, leaving a large clean rectangle on the age-blackened wall.

"Now they've decided to clean the whole thing," said another Jewish activist. "It's the first cleaning it's had in 200 years."

Overcoming apathy for flu program

Pettis County's part in what has been termed the biggest public health effort in American history will begin next Sunday, when the swine flu mass immunization clinic opens.

After numerous delays, the county's share of the vaccine has begun to arrive, and will be administered at the National Guard armory next Sunday and Monday. The clinic expects to handle between 7,000 and 10,000 people.

Getting the vaccine was only half the problem. There remain the challenges of getting the population out for the clinics, and processing the people in an orderly and efficient manner.

In the first area, apathy may prove to be the most formidable foe. The Missouri Division of Health recently conducted a telephone survey of state residents, and although it found a majority to be prepared to participate in the program, in the central part of the state only 31 per cent said they would "definitely take the vaccine."

We hope Pettis County can do better than that. This is especially true for the over-65 age group, which we have a lot of, and who are most vulnerable to the swine flu and its complications. But other age groups also should take the threat seriously. (During the 1918 flu pandemic that killed more than 20 million people, more than 17,000 died in Missouri, most their 20s and 30s.) And despite the great strides medicine has made, there is still no cure for influenza, only vaccines.

This is not intended as a scare tactic, but only to point out that the potential public health threat is a serious one. In such situations, prudence obviously dictates only one course.

The Sedalia Jaycees, to their credit, have volunteered to administer the immunization program. This will be no small job, and the county is indebted to the club for taking on this task. The Pettis County health nurses also are proving, once again, that they were a wise investment back in 1968.

Pentagon's favorite has costly send-off

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

Washington — The Pentagon delivered its biggest bicentennial salute this year not to one of our dead military heroes, but to Rep. F. Edward Hebert, the crotchety old democrat from Louisiana, who is still very much alive.

The crusty congressman is finally stepping down after a 36-year career dedicated primarily to championing causes dear to the hearts of the brass hats.

Herbert was a member of the House Armed Services Committee from its inception in 1947, and served as the committee's chairman from 1971 to 1974 when a group of feisty freshmen deposed him in favor of someone less inclined to carry water for the Pentagon.

Hebert had indeed been a one-man bucket brigade for the military. From the center of a two-tiered curved desk, with two small American flags flanking him, he ruled the committee with the stern hand of a drill sergeant. At times, he appeared to be playing Charley McCarthy to the Pentagon's Edgar Bergan. Perched upon the Defense Department's knee, he opened his mouth and the military spoke.

The brass hats deeply appreciate such faithful service, so they decided to bid farewell to the old soldier in style. As an occasion for the ceremony, they chose homecoming weekend at Tulane University, in Hebert's hometown of New Orleans. Tulane, appropriately enough, was playing Army.

With a blaring of trumpets and rolling of drums, military officials assembled the night before the game to say goodbye. The secretary of the Army was present, as was the Army chief of staff, the West Point commandant, and a host of lesser lights.

Four military bands, one from each of the services, played swan songs for Hebert. The Army had flown in its 60-man Chorus and Herald Trumpets, which usually plays only at the White House in honor of visiting heads of state. The 80-member Army chief of staff's band, decked out in special bicentennial uniforms, was also there.

The Chorus and Herald Trumpets led the other bands in a ceremonial military tattoo. It was the first time such a tattoo had ever been performed on a college campus.

Hebert, according to eyewitnesses, was "visibly moved" by the military's farewell for him. The taxpayers should be moved as well; it cost them $27,158 to bid aloha to Eddie Hebert.

Footnote: A military spokesman claimed the money spent in honor of Hebert's departure was not wasted. The ceremony' he said, "provided good local exposure for recruiting."

STAFF POWER — It isn't always the Senators but their anonymous aides who pull the strings on Capitol Hill. Sometimes the busy senators are only dimly aware of what their assistants are doing in their names.

Take the case of Wallace Johnson, a quietly efficient member of Sen. Harrison Williams' staff. The senator, a democrat fromNew Jersey, is a power on Capitol Hill. This enhances the status of Johnson, who acts in Williams' name.

Johnson, therefore, has become the object of the attentions of Robert Pines, a New York contractor, who sells about $2 million worth of pipe annually to the government.

Pines often wines and dines the unsung Senate aide at the fashionable eating spots of New York City and Washington. "We talk business over dinner, and I pick up the tab. It's a way of doing business," Pines acknowledged to our reporters, Andy Penn and Jim Platt.

Pines has also dropped a few hundred dollars into Senator Williams' campaign chest — $950 that we have been able to trace. He made the contributions, he admitted, to "nurture" his relationship with the senator.

When Pines wants a favor in return, he calls upon Johnson. For example, Pines dearly wanted a $179,000 pipe contract from the General Services Administration back in April, 1973. So he dashed off a "Dear Wally" letter to his favorite dinner companion, asking for help in obtaining the contract.

"I appreciate the friendship of you folks," Pines added, "and if called upon at election time shall as ever express my material appreciation." Then in a postscript, he enclosed a copy of the contract bid and asked Johnson to call GSA.

GSA records confirm, indeed, that Johnson made the requested call and that Pines was awarded the contract. It is uncertain whether Johnson's call influenced GSA's decision, since Pines was also the low bidder on the contract.

But GSA records show that Johnson intervened three subsequent times when Pines had problems with the contract. The GSA contracting officer called the interventions "unusual."It was all the more unusual since Pines doesn't happen to be a New Jersey constituent.

Johnson took a two-year leave from the senator's staff and returned last January. Joyfully, Pines contributed $300 to the Williams campaign "to celebrate the return of Wally Johnson."

Footnote: Senator Williams told us he was not involved in the string pulling for Pines. But the Senator, while expressing full confidence in Wallace Johnson, also accepted full responsibility for any impropriety that might have occurred.

Creditors will call on Carter

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Back in July, when Jimmy Carter won the Democratic nomination, it was said that politically he owed nobody anything. Now, in November, he is dodging a debtor's prison. He owes everybody something, and the IOU's are coming due.

The victor who wins by a landslide is home free. The fellow who squeaks into office cannot escape the creditors hammering at his door. New York City gave Carter a margin of 675,000 votes — more than enough to swing New York's 41 electoral votes — and on the day after the election Mayor Beame was on the horn. "Jimmy," he was saying, "let's talk about those bond guarantees."

The President-elect will be hearing from the blacks, of course. Their massive support in the Southern and border states permitted Carter to rack up 134 electoral votes before his opponent even got started. In his first press conference after the election, Carter publicly acknowledged the debt. He will pay it off in part by minority appointments to high offices, in part by seeking legislation affecting jobs and welfare.

It may be possible to stall Hizzoner; after all, what is good for Abe Beame in Manhattan is good for Frank Rizzo in Philadelphia, and good for every other troubled mayor as well. A program of federal guarantees of municipal bonds would raise some profound constitutional questions. Satisfying the black creditors should cause no particular problems. But the President-elect will have his hands full in coping with a third collection agency; organized labor. The AFL-CIO's George Meany, chomping a big cigar, is waiting to be paid.

A recent analysis by Congressional Quarterly indicates the magnitude of Carter's debt. A spokesman for labor's Committee on Political Education says modestly that "we put out our biggest effort ever." And the spokesman points not only to Carter's victory, but also to the election of 19 senators and 258 members of the House.

For starters, organized labor doubtless will remind the president of a specific pledge in the Democratic party platform: "We will seek repeal of Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act which allows States to legislate the anti-union open shop." Procedurally, such an act would require a bill only two sentences long — one sentence to nullify the state laws, another sentence to fix an effective date. The right-to-work laws, in Meany's view, have been as painful as a toothache. He will demand that Carter pay up promptly on this obligation.

The party platform makes another pledge: "We will support the full right of construction workers to picket a job site peacefully." This refers to the bill that was known in dog Latin as the "common situs picketing bill." Both houses of Congress approved the bill a year ago, only to have it vetoed by President Ford in January. Meany will have a handy-dandy copy in his pocket when he makes his social call.

There is much more. Carter is committed to a party platform that says: "We support the right of public employes and agricultural workers to organize and bargain collectively." The platform promises "to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act to speed up redress of grievances of workers asserting their legal rights." The platform promises an increased minimum wage, a comprehensive mine safety law, minimum federal standards for workmen's compensation, extension of the Occupational Safety and Health Act to cover all employes, and such goodies as public works projects paying union wages.

To be sure, some of the senators and congressmen that Big Labor thinks it has bought and paid for may prove a disappointment. Repeal of the right-to-work laws, which seems a simple matter, could turn out to be tough. But other aims could be achieved by executive order, or by presidential guidelines to the regulatory agencies. When it comes to the machinery of federal power, Meany is a master mechanic. And as a bill collector, as Carter will soon discover, Meany has no peer in the realm.

Re-entering job market can be tough

WASHINGTON—As it must happen during every change of administration in Washington, there is a great deal of job hunting going on right now. The problem for many presidential appointees is that it's very difficult to go back to what they were doing before they got into the government. Having once tasted the power of running a billion-dollar federal bureau it's hard to return to selling insurance or working on a detergent account for J. Walter Thompson.

Buchwald

Unfortunately, government experience does not necessarily mean that you're qualified to handle an important job in the private sector.

Here is an example of what I mean.

"Please sit down, Mr. Maximum. Mr. Ratcliffe of the Republican National Committee spoke very highly of you. I see here you're looking for a position with our firm."

"Yes, sir. For the past eight years I was Director of the U.S. Government Inter-Office Affairs Council on Coordination and Rectification. It was one of the highest management jobs in Washington."

"What excatly did you do?"

"Our department was in charge of reviewing position papers on rectification of abuses of nonregulatory agencies involved in the areas of essential input and output, and to recommend to the White House their long-range effects on the economy."

"Could you be more specific?"

"I'm sorry, I didn't understand the question."

"What was your role in the department?"

"I was in charge of the entire operation. My staff brought me papers and I either signed them or refused to sign them. In many cases I advised that they be passed on to another bureau. In some instances I recommended hearings, and in others I turned over the matter to the Justice Department."

"Mr. Maximum, that's all very interesting, but since you are applying for a job as executive vice president of this corporation we're trying to find out what kind of contribution you could make here."

"I believe my strength would be in budget planning. I had 20,000 people working for me and our yearly budget was $1.5 billion. It was a great responsibility because if we didn't spend all the money in the fiscal year we had to give it back to the Treasury. I'm proud to say I always managed to spend every cent of it."

"That's very good, Mr. Maximum, when you're working for the government. But when you're working for a private company the job of an executive is to save the corporation money."

"Why would you want to do that?"

"Well, we like to show a profit at the end of the year."

"What's a profit?"

"It's the money left over, after all our costs and taxes are paid."

"That's fascinating. We never worried about profits in the government. Our job was to spend money and get the job done. I believe the best way to solve a problem is to throw money at it."

"Yes, I see what you mean. Could you tell me what you consider was your greatest accomplishment during your government service?"

"Of course. I was responsible for 'Operation Molehill.' Everyone always talks about making a mountain out of a molehill. But no one has ever actually done it. I put my research and development people on it and they came up with a pilot program which would cost $100 million.

"The Office of Management and Budget turned it down, so I went directly to the chairman of the Senate Committee on Bulldozers and told him if he could get the project off the ground, we'd build the mountain out of the molehill in his state. He immediately got the legislation passed and I got my $100 million."

"That's very good. We'll call you, Mr. Maximum, in a few days and give you our answer."

"Thank you. I'm sure I can be of great value to your company. Just give me the input and I'll give you the output, no matter what it costs."

Cards, L.A. set for rematch

AP Sports Writer

There is a very good reason for the glint in Lawrence McCutcheon's eye as his Los Angeles Rams face the St. Louis Cardinals in Sunday's key National Football League matchup.

The last time the Rams faced the Cardinals was in the 1975 NFC divisional playoffs. McCutcheon shredded the St. Louis defense that day for 202 yards rushing, a playoff record.

The Rams could use that kind of production from their big runner again Sunday. With five weeks to go in the regular season, division races are getting down to the nitty-gritty.

Nowhere is the nail biting tougher than in the National Conference West where Los Angeles has a half-game lead over San Francisco. The 49ers play at Atlanta this week, hoping to use the 2-7 Falcons to keep the pressure on Los Angeles.

The Rams, however, will get no sympathy from St. Louis. The Cardinals are in a three-way tangle in the NFC East, one game back of Dallas and one in front of Washington.

Dallas hosts the Monday night game against 2-7 Buffalo while Washington faces the winless New York Giants Sunday.

Other Sunday games are Denver at San Diego, Houston at Cincinnati, Kansas City at Oakland, Miami at Pittsburgh, New England at Baltimore, Tampa Bay at the New York Jets, Detroit at New Orleans, Green Bay at Chicago, Seattle at Minnesota and Philadelphia at Cleveland.

While the Rams-Cards game holds major significance at the top of two divisions, survival is on the line in the Pittsburgh-Miami matchup. Both have 5-4 records, and a loss now would jolt post-season hopes of these two perennial playoff teams.

The American Conference East race is spotlighted in the Baltimore-New England matchup. The Colts are two games ahead of the Patriots and a victory Sunday would just about seal the issue.

Oakland, leaders in the AFC West, are a fat three games ahead of Denver. Oakland's magic number for a fourth consecutive West title is two and they will try to reduce that against Kansas City.

Like the Raiders, the Minnesota Vikings are closing in on another division crown. With Seattle on deck this week, the Vikes' magic number for nailing down their eighth NFC Central crown in nine years is three.

Cincinnati staved two games in front of Pittsburgh and Cleveland in the AFC Central with last Monday night's victory over Los Angeles. Now the Bengals can finish off Houston, which is three games back.

Raiders give Stenerud shot at 1,000th point

OAKLAND (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs' Jan Stenerud should reach the 1,000-point mark even before the Oakland Raiders clinch another division title.

Stenerud, the 32-year-old placekicker, needs only three points in Sunday's game against the Raiders to become the eighth 1,000-point scorer in National Football League history. George Blanda, forced into retirement by Oakland this year, leads the list with 2,002.

The Chiefs' kicker had a shot at three points last week, but a 27-yard field goal attempt was blocked by the Pittsburgh Steelers. It was that kind of a day, as Kansas City suffered its first shutout loss in 13 years, 45-0.

Oakland is coming off a 28-27 victory over the Chicago Bears and is 8-1, in position to clinch at least a tie for the American Conference West title Sunday. Runner-up Denver, 5-4, is at San Diego, 4-5, and the Chiefs already are out of the running at 3-6.

The Raiders' Ken Stabler increased his touchdown pass total to 18 with three last Sunday, including two to Cliff Branch, who has caught nine TD strikes this year. Branch's last six touchdown catches have been on plays of 74, 41, 46, 88, 75 and 49 yards.

One of the beaten Bears called Branch the Raiders' "Solid Gold Cadillac," explaining, "They set you up with a running game and then go to their Solid Gold Cadillac."

The Oakland running attack, without Marv Hubbard this season, has had some rough days and ranks 10th in the AFC. But the Chiefs' defense is ranked last in the conference against rushing, last over-all and has allowed the most points in the NFL, 277.

Kansas City's offense, run by quarterback Mike Livingston, had turned in four consecutive good performances before being stopped by the Steelers.

Coach Paul Wiggin called the shutout "a black mark," and guard Ed Budde, the only player who remembers the last shutout, said, "I didn't think anyone could hold this offense scoreless."

SFCC gets slow start in tournament action

ST. LOUIS — The State Fair Community College Roadrunners got off to a bad start in the four-team tournament here Friday night losing to the host Forest Park Highlanders 79-68.

Randolph Harris scored 18 points for the Highlanders to lead their attack. He led both teams in scoring.

Forest Park got off to a good start against Bill Barton's Roadrunner basketball squad. The Highlanders worked up a 22-4 lead over SFCC early in the contest, but the Roadrunners came alive from the floor and came within six points, 40-34 at the half.

At the start of the second half, the Roadrunners appeared to be coming around getting within two, 44-42. Then State Fair's shooting percentage dropped drastically for the remainder of the game.

"We couldn't have beat them if we'd played them ten times this early in the year," said SFCC's Coach Barton. "They're as good a club as we've ever played this early in the year."

Coach Barton predicts that the Highlanders will not get much better as the season progresses for them. "They're already as good as they'll get," said Barton. "They won't be much better in February."

Forest Park had four starters back from last year and Coach Barton said he was proud of his Roadrunner squad. "We were down something like 22-4 in the first half and we came back within two at one time," he said. "But we're gonna get a lot better — no problem. I'm not upset."

In the other game Friday night, the Belleville (Illinois) Area Community College Dutchmans smothered Moraine Valley out of Chicago 124-71.

Scoring

Forest Park (79) — Randolph Harris 18, Brian Jones 14, Kelvin Henderson 12, Brian Troupe 14, Dana Clay 6, Glenn Marshall 4, Greg Jefferies 8, Charles Coyle 3.

Three named again to all-league squad

Three senior girls from the Kaysinger Conference champion Green Ridge volleyball team have repeated on this year's all-league team, announced Friday by league secretary Bob Stone.

The three are Brenda Myears, Janet Brownfield and Gail Harding. Myears was the top vote-getter in the balloting receiving 67 of a possible 70 votes.

Other girls named on the team include Barb Fangohr, Sacred Heart; Cindy Heimsoth, Cole Camp; Joan Maness, Stover; Joyce McCorkle, LaMonte; Kim Rank, Lincoln; Teresa Roark, Smithton; Patty Schockmann, Warsaw.

Sacred Heart's Bobbi Taylor was named to the honorable mention list along with the following players: Julie Brownfield (Green Ridge), Diana Dilthey, Paula Guthrie and Cori Childers (LaMonte), Leslie Case (Stover), Diane Repper (Lincoln), Jana Green and Patty Pope (Smithton), Leigh Barb (Warsaw), Wanda Pritzel, Donna Henning and Kim Williams (Cole Camp) and Tona Dawson (Northwest).

Sacred Heart takes consolation trophy

LINCOLN — The Sacred Heart Gremlins claimed the consolation trophy here Friday night in the Kaysinger Conference Tournament beating out the Warsaw Wildcats 56-50.

In the other game, the Cole Camp Bluebirds edged out the Smithton Tigers 40-39. Cole Camp went up against the Stover Bulldogs Saturday night in the championship game and Smithton went up against Green Ridge in last night's opener for third place.

After an 8-8 draw at the end of the opening quarter, the Gremlins outscored Warsaw by three, 16-13, in the second quarter claiming a 24-21 advantage at the half.

The Wildcats couldn't get much going in the third period scoring only eight points before putting forth their best effort in the final quarter scoring 21 points.

"I thought last night we played the best game we've played the whole year," said a satisfied Tom Jennewein, Sacred Heart coach.

Coach Jennewein was pleased that his team's rebounding ability finally came around for the Gremlins. "I told the kids we were gonna have to block out or we would get beat," he said.

On the defensive boards, the Gremlins out-rebounded Warsaw 29-17 and held a two rebound margin over the Wildcats on the offensive boards.

The Cole Camp Bluebirds used a good first half output to hold off the second half surged Smithton Tigers.

Smithton had a bad first half scoring only 13 points to Cole Camp's 20 points.

In the final two quarters, the Tigers made a bid for a comeback victory, but the stern Bluebird defense held Smithton a point short.

Kim Gooch led Cole Camp as well as the Tigers in scoring with 18 points.

Iowa St. win forces four-way Big 8 tie

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Dexter Green ran for two touchdowns Saturday as Iowa State surprised ninth-ranked Nebraska 37-28 to take a share of the Big Eight Conference lead.

Luther Blue returned a kickoff 95 yards for another touchdown and Scott Kollman booted three field goals to ice the victory.

The final seconds were played without goalposts after fans swarmed onto the field and uprooted them after the Cyclones scored the icing touchdown for their first home victory against the Cornhuskers since 1959.

The win boosted Iowa State's season record to 8-2 and their league mark to 4-2. Nebraska dropped to 7-2-1 and 4-2 and a tie for the conference lead.

Green scored on a one-yard run in the first period after Kollman's first field goal, a 21yarder. Green scored from the three midway through the fourth period as Iowa State went ahead to stay after Nebraska pulled even at 20-20 earlier in the period.

Blue's kickoff return came after Bobby Thomas had taken a 43-yard touchdown pass from Vince Ferragamo with one minute remaining in the first quarter.

Monte Anthony had a 14-yard touchdown run for Cornhuskers, their only score of the second period. Ferragamo teamed up for another Nebraska touchdown on the second play of the final period following a scoreless third period.

Sooners hang on

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Quarterback Thomas Lott scored two touchdowns, one from 49 yards out, and teammates Horace Ivory and Kenny King each ran for more than 100 yards as Oklahoma outlasted Missouri, 27-20, Saturday, bumping the Tigers out of the Big Eight Conference race.

Lott's long touchdown run and a 39-yard scoring sprint by King put the Sooners ahead, 27-10, in the third period. But the Sooners had to choke off a furious Missouri rally in the final quarter to keep their Big Eight title and bowl hopes alive.

Quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz came off the bench to direct the Tigers to a pair of touchdown drives in the final period. But the Tiger rally fell short when cornerback Terry Peters intercepted a Pisarkiewicz aerial on the Oklahoma three with 4:12 left.

Pisarkiweicz led the team back down the field after the Sooners couldn't move but a fourth-down pass to Kellen Winslow fell inches short of the first down on the Sooner 19 and the Sooners took ovler over with 10 seconds left.

Missouri jumped out to a 7-3 first-quarter lead on an 11-yard pass from Pete Woods to Leo Lewis while Oklahoma managed only a 35-yard field goal by Uwe von Schamann. But a two-yard touchdown run by Lott and a 25-yard field goal by von Schamann gave the Sooners a 13-10 halftime advantage and they never trailed after that.

Oklahoma, ranked No. 14, is now 6-3-1 over-all and tied for the Big Eight lead with a 4-2 mark. The 11th-ranked Tigers fell to 6-4 and 4-3.

Cowboys coast

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Workhorse running back Terry Miller erupted for five touchdowns as Oklahoma State survived a late Kansas State threat and rolled past the Wildcats 45-21 Saturday in their Big Eight football game.

Miller, who finished the day with 221 yards on 37 carries, gave the Cowboys a lead they never surrendered when he rambled from nine yards out in the second quarter to make it 10-7.

The 6-foot, 196-pound junior, who had nine touchdowns going into the game, tacked on a 16yard scoring dash in the third period and exploded for touchdowns of 9, 1, and 18 yards as the Cowboys pulled away in the final quarter.

Miller's one-man show boosted his career rushing total to 2,592 yards, an Oklahoma State record. 4

The victory lifted Oklahoma State's season mark to 6-3 and the Cowboys are tied for first place with a 4-2 mark in the Big Eight. The Wildcats are 1-9 over-all and have not won any of their six conference games.

KU turnovers hurt

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Nineteenth-ranked Colorado, capitalizing on 10 Kansas turnovers, used a career-high 168yard rushing performance by senior tailback Tony Reed to crush the Jayhawks 40-17 Saturday in Big Eight football.

The victory boosted the Buffaloes' conference record to 4-2 and moved them into a fiveway tie for first place in the league. Nebraska, Oklahoma State, Oklahoma and Iowa State have identical records with only one Big Eight weekend remaining.

The Buffs turned three Kansas errors into 13 points in the first half and carried a 20-17 lead into the dressing room. Billy Waddy's 95-yard kickoff return accounted for the Buffs' other first-half touchdown.

James Mayberry returned the second-half kick 72 yards and fullback Jim Kelleher followed with a seven-yard scoring run to put Colorado ahead 27-17.

Later in the third quarter, a fumbled pitchout by the Jayhawks at their 25 set up another Kelleher score. Quarterback Jeff Knapple completed the rout with a five-yard run in the final period.

Jayhawk stopped

KU tailback Laverne Smith is stopped for a short gain by Colorado defensive tackle Laval Short in Saturday's action. KU got clobbered by the Buffaloes 40-17. (UPI)

Pitt, Maryland still unbeaten

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tony Dorsett bolted 30 yards for his third touchdown of the game to help top-ranked Pittsburgh fight off a second-half rally and defeat West Virginia 24-16 Saturday in college football.

Officials from the Orange, Cotton and Sugar Bowls looked on as the Panthers' record climbed to 10-0. Facing an open date, they're likely assured their pick of bowls when bids go out next Saturday.

Quarterback Matt Cavanaugh and Dorsett, college football's all-time rushing leader, both surpassed the 100-yard mark rushing early in the third quarter as Pitt took a 17-3 lead with a drive that ended with Carson Long's 27-long field goal. But West Virginia, 5-5, responded with its best drive of the day, a 57-yard march capped by a 14yard touchdown pass from Dan Kendra to Steve Lewis.

Maryland 20
Clemson 0

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Unbeaten and sixth-ranked Maryland, rescued time and again by its defense, turned back stubborn Clemson 20-0 Saturday with the help of a 33yard touchdown pass by Mark Manges on a fake field goal call.

The generally uninspired effort, watched by scouts from four postseason bowls, stretched Maryland's winning streak to 14—10 this season—and was the 19th consecutive victory by the Terps over an Atlantic Coast Conference foe.

Notre Dame 21
Alabama 18

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame continued its mastery over Alabama Saturday as Rick Slager passed for 208 yards in the first half, including a 56-yard touchdown bomb to Dan Kelleher, and led the Irish to a 21-18 victory in the first regular-season meeting between two of college football's greatest names.

Notre Dame built a 21-7 halftime lead but survived a series of second-half scares and didn't nail down the victory until Jim Browner intercepted Jeff Rutledge's pass in the end zone with 4:17 left and halfback Pete Cavan wide open and waving for the ball across the field. Rutledge, however, never saw him.

Michigan 38
Illinois 7

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Rob Lytle scored three touchdowns and became Michigan's all-time rushing leader Saturday as the fourth-ranked Wolverines rolled to a 38-7 Big Ten football victory over Illinois.

Lytle scored on a five-yard pass from quarterback Rick Leach in the second quarter, then scored on runs of 13 and 3 yards in the third period as Michigan raised its conference record to 6-1 and 9-1 over-all, heading into next Saturday's showdown championship game at Ohio State.

Lytle, a senior from Fremont, Ohio running at both fullback and tailback, rushed for 89 yards to put his career total at 3,085—13 more than the previous Michigan record set by Billy Taylor from 1969 through 1971.

So. Cal. 20
Washington 3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vince Evans' passing provided one touchdown and set up another and Glen Walker kicked two field goals Saturday as third-ranked Southern California downed stubborn Washington 20-3.

The Trojans' victory sends them into next weekend's Pacific-8 title showdown against UCLA with a perfect 6-0 conference record. The Bruins, second-ranked and unbeaten, ran their Pac-8 record to 6-0 Saturday with a victory over Oregon State.

Texas Tech 34
SMU 7

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Rodney Allison guided fifthranked Texas Tech through an icy snowstorm Saturday to a runaway 34-7 Southwest Conference verdict over Southern Methodist.

The junior quarterback ran for two touchdowns as the unbeaten Red Reaiders mounted a 24-0 halftime lead and rolled to their eighth consecutive victory.

Georgia cops SEC crown

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Kevin McLee ran for 203 yards and set a school single-game rushing record as Georgia trounced Auburn 28-0 Saturday to win the Southeastern Conference football championship and a berth in the Sugar Bowl.

The victory gave Vince Dooley's Georgia Bulldogs their first conference title since they won the championship in 1968, also by defeating Auburn in the showdown game.

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (AP) — Missouri Western ended its season play Saturday with a 17-13 football victory over Central Missouri State.

Missouri Western finished its season with 4-5 record. Central Missouri which is 3-7 finishes its season next week against Southwest Missouri.

U.S. women take Wightman

LONDON (AP) — The United States recaptured the Wightman Cup women's tennis competition from Britain for the first time since 1973 Saturday as Chris Evert defeated Sue Barker 2-6, 6-2, 6-2.

The American team won the best-of-seven series 5-2 after taking two of the final three matches. Prior to Miss Evert's clinching victory, American Rosemary Casals was forced to retire in the middle of her match with Britain's No. 1 player, Virginia Wade. Miss Casals reinjured her left leg.

Americans Ann Kiyomura and Mona Guerrant won the final match, a doubles event, by defeating Sua Mappin and Lesley Charles 6-2, 8-6. The U.S triumph was its 39th in 48 Wightman Cup series.

Miss Evert, the top women's player in the world, was broken twice in the first set by the 20year-old Miss Barker. The blonde Englishwomen, who has never beaten Miss Evert, kept her opponent off balance with deep shots.

In the second set, however, Miss Evert regained her form and jumped to a 3-0 lead. Miss Barker began pressing and Miss Evert eased to victory in the set to even the match.

In the final set, American moved to a 3-1 lead before Miss Barker broke service. But Miss Evert won the final three games of the set and the match.

The Casals-Wade match was even through two sets when Miss Casals was forced to retire. The American won the first set 6-3, then had two match points in the 10th game of the second set. But Miss Wade saved both and, on the second match point, Miss Casals reinjured herself lunging after a shot.

A doctor and non-playing U.S captain Vicki Berner rushed on court but Miss Casals continued to play. She twice held serve but didn't threaten Miss Wade's service.

At 7-7, Miss Wade broke at love, then served an ace to win the set. At that point, Miss Casals retired.

The United States built a 3-1 lead after the first two days of play. The two teams split the opening matches when Miss Evert defeated Miss Wade and Miss Barker upset Miss Casals.

But the American's took control on the second day as Terry Holladay edged Glynis Coles and the American doubles team of Casals-Evert topped the tandem of Wade-Barker, who were playing together for the first time.

Two teams dominate WCC all-loop picks

League champion Harrisonville and runner-up Pleasant Hill dominated the list of West Central Conference all-stars, which was made public Friday.

Pleasant Hill, which counted as it only loss of league play to Harrisonville, placed two players on the offensive team and six on the defensive lineup.

Pleasant Hill also picked up another slot on the specality departments, when Glenn Bowman was named as the league's top kick off man.

Harrisonville placed three players on the offensive team and one on the defensive alignment. Steve Catron, Harrisonville, was selected as the top place-kicker.

One of the three spots on the offensive team snared by the league champion Wildcats was at quarterback with 5-10 senior Tim Raine. The two running backs on the first team were Cecil Bratton, Knob Noster, and Tom Bayless of Warrensburg. Rounding out the backfield was Harrisonville's fullback Tom Britz.

Both Pleasant Hill ends, Brian Richardson and Andy McLagan, were named to the first team. At the tackle positions on offense were Jef Walker, Harrisonville, and Jeff Becker, Raymore-Peculiar.

Mike Monroe of Warrensburg and Knob Noster's Steve Osborne were selected as the top offensive guards. Clinton's Mike Dye was named the center; and the flanker was Mark Kennon of El Dorado Springs.

Defensively, Pleasant Hill players nailed down the following positions: David Parris, end; Walter Crotty, lineman; Ronnie Gibbons and David Ralston, linebackers; and Brent Palmer and Roger Mayfield in the defensive secondary.

Harrisonville's lone player on the defensive unit was lineman Scott Douglas.

Other players named to the defensive first unit were Mike Jennex, Clinton, end; Holden's John Dean and Dye of Clinton on the line; linebacker Richard Miles of Warrensburg; and Jim Smitka, Clinton, defensive secondary.

Bratton was selected as the kick off and punt returner; and El Dorado Springs punter Mark Kennon was named as the best at his position.

Bulletin

LINCOLN — Third-seeded Cole Camp, sparked by the 29-point performance of Delwyn Duncan, upended first-seeded Stover 60-53 to win the championship in the Kaysinger Conference Basketball Tournament played here.

Cole Camp grabbed the lead early, besting Stover 16-6 in the first quarter, and was never headed. Stover pulled to within three points late in the game, but just couldn't catch up.

In a game earlier, Green Ridge downed Smithton 47-38 to take third-place tourney honors.

Opening lead — 4 ♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Here is another hand from a World's championship match. It is a problem hand. Can you reader's make seven diamonds against a club lead with the advantage of seeing all the cards in front of you?

The Italian declarer did not find the play at the table, but it was there.

All South has to do is to run off all his diamonds. After six diamonds have been played, dummy should be left holding four spades, the seven of clubs, a low heart after carefully jettisoning the jack of that suit and a diamond.

West will be holding four spades, the king of hearts, and queen of clubs.

Now the last diamond is led. West must throw the queen of clubs. Dummy's little spade will have done its work and can be discarded.

Now South cashes dummy's ace, king and queen of spades. On the last of those three leads East will be forced to throw his last club which will establish dummy's seven spot, or unguard his queen of hearts to give declarer two heart tricks, since the ace will now drop both the queen and king.

A nice problem indeed and one can't really blame the man at the table for not working it out.

Ask the Jacobys

A New York reader wants to know how good a player the late Merwyn D. (Jimmy) Maier was.

We don't really know. He was only 33 in 1942 when he died and was already regarded as one of the five or six best in the world. If he had lived he might well have been the greatest of them all.

Rerun of special parents' prayer

Dear Ann: Thanks for honoring requests to rerun special columns. And now will you do me a big favor and print once again "The Prayer For Parents"? My copy is almost illegible. Bless you. — A Mother Who Learned

Dear Mother: Here it is:

A PRAYER FOR PARENTS

"Oh, God, make me a better parent. Help me to understand my children, to listen patiently to what they have to say and to respond to their questions kindly. Keep me from interrupting them, talking back to them and contradicting them. Make me as courteous to them as I would have them be to me. Give me the courage to confess my sins against my children and ask them for forgiveness when I know I have done wrong.

"May I not vainly hurt the feelings of my children. Forbid that I should laugh at their mistakes, or resort to shame and ridicule as punishment. Let me not tempt a child to lie or steal. Guide me hour by hour that I may demonstrate by all I say and do that honesty produces happiness.

"Reduce, I pray, the meanness in me. May I cease to nag; and when I am out of sorts, help me, O Lord, to hold my tongue. Blind me to the little errors of my children and help me to see the good things they do. Give me a ready word for honest praise.

"Help me treat my children as those of their own age. Let me not expect from them the judgment of adults. Allow me not to rob them of the opportunity to wait upon themselves, to think, to choose, and to make their own decisions.

"Forbid that I should ever punish them for my selfish satisfaction. May I grant them all their wishes that are reasonable and have the courage always to withhold a privilege which I know will do them harm.

"Make me so fair and just, so considerate and companionable that they will have genuine esteem for me. Fit me to be loved and imitated by my children. Oh, God, do give me calm and poise and self-control."

Dear Ann Landers: My problem may seem inconsequential compared to most you get, but it's big to me and I need your help.

Our two children were recently given violins from a relative who loves music. It was a beautiful gesture, but when they practice it drives me crazy. This past August I suggested they practice in the backyard, but the neighbors on both sides complained.

I don't want the children to lose interest in music, but the noise is more than I can stand. Please, Ann, suggest something. — Double Trouble

Dear D.T.: If your letter had appeared 45 years ago in Dorothy Dix's column, I would have sworn my mother wrote it. Everything fits.

Buy a pocket-size transistor radio with earplugs. It would be well worth the investment.

CONFIDENTIAL To Starry-Eyes: The man you think could be a "model husband" sounds interesting, but he doesn't sound like a working model to me. Keep your job, Toots.

Some analysts see record in '76 Soviet grain harvest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some analysts in the Agriculture Department believe the Soviet Union probably is completing a record grain harvest in excess of the previous high of 222.5 million metric tons in 1973.

On Nov. 5, a member of the Soviet Politburo, Fydor Kulakov, said that by the first of this month more than 220 million tons of grain had been harvested and that more corn and rice still remained in the fields.

Accordingly, the USDA said this week it had raised its estimate of Soviet grain production this year to the 220 million tons mentioned by Kulakov. A month ago, the department had estimated Russian output at 215 million tons. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

Fletcher Pope Jr., a Soviet expert in the department's Economic Research Service, told a reporter that when the Russians "give us an estimate we accept it" at face value.

Customarily, USDA begins making its own estimates of Soviet grain production months ahead of official Moscow announcements. Pope said that this year's Soviet grain output "still could creep up" from the 220 million tons now estimated. "I expect it will be larger than the 1973 crop," he said.

The harvest is a dramatic recovery for Soviet agriculture from the critically small 1975 harvest of 140 million tons, the smallest in a decade. It forced Moscow to import huge quantities of grain, including U.S. wheat, corn and soybeans.

It also prompted a new five-year agreement that calls for Russia to buy at least six million tons of wheat and corn annually from the United States.

According to the agreement, which took effect with wheat and corn deliveries to Russia beginning this Oct. 1, the Soviets can buy up to eight million tons annually without further talks with U.S. officials. If more is sought, further discussions are called for.

So far, the Soviets have contracted for about 6.6 million tons of grain in the first year of the agreement through next Sept. 30. This includes about four million tons of corn and 2.6 million of wheat. Total U.S. exports of wheat, corn and other livestock feed grain to all countries, including Russia, are expected to be around 75 million tons in 1976-77.

Despite the U.S. government's role in the agreement with the Soviet Union, all sales are being handled as usual by private grain firms. No government credit is involved in the current sales to Russia.

Although the Soviets already have bought slightly more than the minimum amount of wheat and corn called for in the agreement, USDA officials say Russia probably will take more and thus push sales in the first year to around eight million tons.

The Russians, however, seem to buy in periodic spurts of a week or so at a time. The latest round of purchases ended with the announced sale on Oct. 13 of 100,000 tons of wheat.

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since last winter, government inspectors found illegal traces of the chemical DES in three beef livers in the third quarter of this year, the Agriculture Department says.

The chemical, known formally as diethylstilbestrol, has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory animals when fed to them in large doses. A synthetic growth hormone, DES is fed to cattle to make them gain weight faster. Federal regulations prohibit any trace of it in food products for human consumption.

Officials said the three tainted livers were among 500 tested for DES at meat-packing plants, a rate of six-tenths of one per cent. No DES contamination was detected in 459 livers sampled in the second quarter of this year, but in the January-March quarter three DES samples were found among 472 livers.

None of the chemical has been reported in the red meat portion of slaughtered animals. Livestock producers are supposed to withdraw DES use long enough before slaughter so that it can be eliminated naturally from an animal's system.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has proposed tighter regulations affecting the imports of parrots and other exotic birds as a further precaution against foreign diseases which could infect U.S. poultry flocks and other fowl.

Officials said the proposal will require foreign government veterinarians to certify that all birds in each shipment were in that country during the preceding 90 days and that the birds were isolated from other fowl for at least 30 days before shipping to the United States.

The department said the tighter rules "would reduce the possibility of imported birds being exposed to communicable diseases before shipment" and provide time for the disease to show up if they have been exposed.

As a further safeguard, foreign birds now are required to be in quarantine for at least 30 days after they arrive in the United States.

Got $239,000? Town's for sale

BANKHEAD SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The asking price hasn't changed a penny since 1970. The Alvan Millers still want $239,000 for this isolated mountain town they bought in 1939.

The package includes seven houses, a hotel and restaurant and about 212 acres of land near Jacumba and Boulevard roads.

Bankhead Springs was nearly sold twice before — first to the Gay Liberation Movement and then as a school for construction workers. The gay group found the price tag too steep, and the contruction workers backed out after a dynamiting permit request was denied.

Mrs. Miller, now in her 80s, and her husband live quietly in the two-story hotel. Miller operates a repair garage. About 20 people live in the town, named for former Alabama Sen. John Hollis Bankhead.

Five-year-old wins new car in raffle

Jimmy's parents, Thomas and Dorothy Conway of suburban Springfield, put the boy's name on a raffle ticket for a drawing at a local high school on Nov. 5, and the ticket won the compact car.

The Conways haven't decided whether to keep the car — they already have two autos and a dune buggy — but "Jimmy tells everybody it's his automobile and we should keep it in the garage until he's old enough to drive it," Mrs. Conway said.

Chivalry, where have you gone?

Chivalrous behavior would seem to have gone out of style if the actions of Danny Gohr of Chicago are any indication. This proves to be more than Danny can take and he informs her of a change in plans (bottom left), and then watches in comfort (bottom right) while she finishes up. (UPI)

Computers safeguarding confidential information

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says it is using computer safeguards to prevent insurance companies that handle Medicare claims from gaining access to confidential information about Social Security beneficiaries.

The safeguards were installed in a new computer system that already links two private insurance company offices to Social Security data banks, the Social Security Administration said Friday. The safeguards will be included when the computer link is extended to 17 more private insurance offices in the next two years, the SSA said.

Reps. John E. Moss, D-Calif., and Charles G. Rose, D-N.C., complained earlier this year that the new computer link could give the firms access to Social Security records listing people's income, assets, marital status and other information irrelevant to Medicare claims.

But Social Security Commissioner James B. Cardwell has told the two congressmen that the new safeguard system, installed Oct. 23, will guarantee that private firms obtain health files only.

Cardwell said there was no indication that the two companies had violated anyone's privacy in the new program, called Social Security Administration Data Acquisition and Response System.

The government hires about 125 private companies to examine and pay the bills for 25 million elderly and disabled Medicare patients. They are called intermediaries in the case of hospital bills and carriers if they handle medical bills.

Three telecommunications systems have been used over the last 10 years to provide the companies with Medicare health insurance records to process the claims. Sixteen months ago, the new computer system was installed at offices of Aetna Life and Casualty Co. in Fort Washington, Pa., and the Hawaii Medical Services Association in Honolulu.

Until Oct. 23, the two companies were encouraged to use the code of the nearest Social Security district office to gain computer access if their own channel or mode was busy. That would have given the private company unlimited access to beneficiary records.

But now a company switching to the district office's mode gets only the health benefits information, the SSA said. Any attempt to open other files would be automatically denied and government security investigators would be notified, Social Security said.

"We are doing everything we can to improve the security of these computers," a SSA spokesman said. "We have an ongoing internal work group looking for risk areas and ways to reduce risks."

Mrs. Sines was driving on a closed road where construction was underway on a proposed freeway. # 'Tonight' show's clown prince dead serious about his music

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A few week ago, millions of viewers might have thought a chap named Muffin Calhoun on ABC's "Bionic Woman" looked suspiciously like Doc Severinson. Their suspicions were right.

It was Doc. But the 49-year-old trumpeter and leader of the big, swinging band on NBC's "Tonight" show has no plans to abandon the horn he's played since childhood and take up play-acting in adulthood.

"If some other part I'd enjoy doing came along, I'd do it," says the good doctor, whose previous acting experience was a "Love, American Style" show years ago. "But I'd certainly never give up my music."

Doc, whose Christian name is Carl, may strike viewers as the late-hour clown prince of music with his flashy "Tonight" threads, his deadpan sallies with Johnny Carson and the occasional crossing of his eyes after he hits C above high C during a rousing band number.

But he's been dead serious about music ever since his father, a dentist in Arlington, Ore., and an excellent violinist, bought him his first trumpet almost 40 years ago.

At the ripe old age of 17, even before he'd graduated from high school, he was a featured trumpeter in Ted Fiorito's band, pulling down, he says, $90 a week, which was pretty good bread for his age.

After high school and the Army, he graduated into the trumpet sections of the powerhouse bands led by Charlie Barnet, Benny Goodman and Tommy Dorsey. In 1949, at age 22, he became an NBC staff musician.

It's even more of a feat when you consider that Doc had no musical schooling in the academic sense, most of his training coming from big bands and a New York teacher named Benny Baker.

He cites Baker's intensive training as "probably one of the reasons I didn't go to music school because I put in much more concentrated study with him.

"And hell, I had to support myself and a family," said Doc, who has five kids. "College was a luxury I couldn't quite afford."

Severinson, who spoke in an easy Southern drawl while sampling the wares at the NBC commissary in Burbank, has led the "Tonight" band since October 1967, when Skitch Henderson left it.

But he's been with the band, on and off, longer than Johnny Carson has hosted "Tonight," Carson having taken over from Jack Paar in October, 1962. Doc joined the show in its early years, in the 1950s, when Steve Allen was its ringmaster.

Leader of the band

"I'd certainly never give up my music," says Doc Severinson, seen here in the NBC commissary in Burbank, Calif. Viewers know him as the trumpeter who's leader of the "Tonight" show band, a post he's held since 1967. A recent acting role in "The Bionic Woman" was a rare non-musical interlude.

(AP)

With Doc's transition from little-known sideman to well-known co-star has come the inevitable branching out. Since the early part of this decade, he's led a group called the Now Generation Brass, backed by a vocal group — his oldest daughter, Nancy, sings in it — called Today's Children.

Of late he's also taken up songwriting, and has one hit, "Stop and Smell the Roses," which he wrote with singer Mac Davis.

"Mac was kind enough to cut me in on that," he grinned, "and I got to looking at all those royalty checks and said, 'Mmm, maybe I ought to try this.'" Then he grew serious.

"Actually, to record in today's market, you've got to come up with your own material. The old days of doing 'cover records,' that's all over."

By this he meant the practice of recording songs others had made into hits. Doc did just that in his early years of leading the "Tonight" band.

He cut several albums of pop hits, but in a so-called "middleof-the-road" musical vein that he admits were intended more to show off a listener's stereo set than achieve anything creative or different.

Alas, he says a bit wistfully, his old middle-of-the-road image still persists in the minds of record buyers, even though he's been hard at work trying to go from MOR to mod.

Last year, he cut a kind of disco-jazz album called "Night Journey," eight of its nine songs co-authored by him. He says it was anything but mood music.

"But that's still what a lot of people thought it was, even down to the album cover," he added. "That's why they (the record company) redid the cover, because some stores put it in among the mood music.

"But it really focused more on a black rhythm-and-blues audience. In fact, that's where I got practically all of my airplay, on r-and-b radio stations.

"A lot of black people came up and said, 'Man, I didn't know you were into that.' But that's where I really started.

"The first really important band I played with was Charlie Barnet — it was a (racially) mixed band at a time mixed was in parenthesis — and I heard the roots of all this stuff."

Doc, legendary as a musician who can sight-read the most difficult arrangements and play them perfectly the first time out, still practices at least two hours a day, despite his success on the "Tonight" show.

Beef over bovine on directory cover

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — A photo of a cow is causing a ruckus at a school famed for its agricultural acumen. The picture of a slightly leering, floppy-eared cow appears on the cover of the new Washington State University campus directory, distributed by the local YMCA.

The cover caused outrage in some quarters, especially the Athletic Department, where track coach John Chaplin considers it an insult, unfairly projecting a "cow college" image for the university.

Chaplin tore the cover off his directory and had it and 19 others -delivered to the YMCA. Then he advertised in the Daily Evergreen, the student newspaper, urging others to send their covers to the YMCA in protest.

Volkswagen

Rabbit

The Amazing Rabbit. The Rabbit is the winner of Road & Track Magazine's Comparison Road Test. Though small on the outside the Rabbit has as much head and leg room as some mid-size cars.

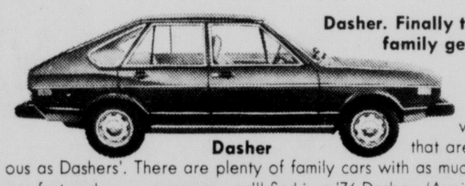
Plus a hatchback at no extra charge.

All in all it's easy to see why the Rabbit came in first. And not just by a hare.



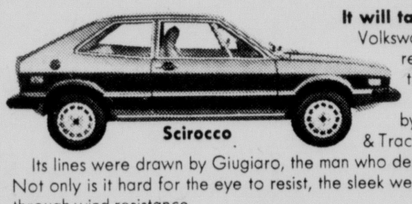
Dasher

Dasher. Finally the one-car family gets a break. There are plenty of luxury cars with interiors that are as sumptuous as Dashers'. There are plenty of family cars with as much room and comfort and cargo space as you'll find in a '76 Dasher. (Available as a 5-seater Family sedan or as a 4-door wagon, or as a hatchback.)

Finally, there are plenty of sports cars that can give you the same nimble handling and fuel injection performance that you'll find in a new Dasher.

All of which makes buying a car rather simple.

You can satisfy all of your family's needs by buying three different cars. Or you can buy a Dasher and get three cars in one.



Scirocco

It will take you by Storm. Volkswagen's Scirocco was recently voted one of the "ten best cars for a changing world" by the editors of Road & Track Magazine.

Its lines were drawn by Giugiaro, the man who designed the Maserati. Not only is it hard for the eye to resist, the sleek wedge styling also cuts through wind resistance.

We suggest that you try our Hot Car for yourself. You'll find that it does as well on the road as it did in Road & Track.

MODEL CHANGE CLEARANCE

Pick any 1976 Rabbit in stock and Deduct $300
Good Selection
4-speed or automatic

4-Door Luxury DASHER Deduct $500

Scirocco Demonstrator (Boss's Car) Deduct $650

WHILE THEY LAST!

ON THE 1976 SUBARU, THE THING MOST EFFECTED BY INFLATION IS THE TIRES.

Over the last few years, many economy cars have shifted from inexpensive to out of reach. Luckily, there's an economy car for today's economy. The 1976 Subaru.

$2899.* A PRICE FROM OUT OF THE PAST.

Believe it or not, that's the actual price of this two-door sedan. And that price includes front wheel drive, power front disc brakes, radial tires, rack and pinion steering and reclining bucket seats. It's almost enough to make you forget the cost of living.

AN ENGINE GEARED FOR TODAY.

Our SEEC-T engine burns clean. So clean the only add-on emission control devices it needs are a couple of simple valves. Those are two reasons you can breathe easier right there.

OUR DRIVING FORCE: FRONT WHEEL DRIVE.

Every Subaru comes standard with front wheel drive. Or to put it in more practical terms; it's more practical. It gives you greater stability and better traction.

All in all, thanks to Subaru, a lot of people will be riding high this year. Despite the economy.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR LIEUT. GEN. SIDNEY B. BERRY,
Superintendent of the U.S. Military Academy

Is it true you considered resigning after it was decided to admit women to West Point? If so, what changed your mind?—N.D., Detroit, Mich.

● I did briefly consider resigning. Having opposed admitting women, I frankly went through a great deal of soul-searching to determine if I could, in good conscience, continue as Superintendent. The key consideration was West Point's emphasis on training combat leaders for the U.S. Army, and the fact that national policy forbids assignment of women to combat units. However, my attitude demanded re-examination as I observed women soldiers at other Army installations running, repelling from cliffs, crawling under barbed wire, firing weapons and patrolling right along with the men. The outstanding manner in which women cadets of the Class of 1980 have accomplished the tough Cadet Basic Training this summer assuages my concerns.

FOR ALEXANDER M. SCHMIDT, M.D.,
commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration

Do you use any vitamin supplements with your meals?—Pierre Brown, San Marcos, Calif.

● No, I don't. I think most people today get adequate nutrition from food and don't need vitamin pills. Nutrition labeling tells which nutrients are in the food. By checking the label, the consumer can see the food value for a particular product and make wise nutrition choices.

FOR LEE MERIWETHER, star of "Barnaby Jones"

Did you think a lot of yourself while you were Miss America?—E.C., Owensboro, Ky.

● I didn't think so at the time, but I must have. During my "reign," a little boy ran alongside my car in a parade. I was busy taking bows and trying to be gracious and, just as he turned off at his corner, he looked me straight in the eye and said, "My sister is prettier than you." That remark was like being doused with cold water. It shook the ego out of me and put me back where I belonged.

FOR EDITH HEAD, designer

● It's believed that originally all garments fastened from right to left. However, in the early days when man wielded his sword, he invariably drew his weapon with his right hand from the left side. With the garment fastened, the right edge over the left, his quick action was greatly hindered, so buttons were reversed for men.

FOR BISHOP FULTON J. SHEEN

As Catholics, are we obliged to believe we will be reunited with our loved ones after death?—L. Moran, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

● Not only as Catholics but as Christians we believe that we will be united with our loved ones after death. Heaven is not joy and isolation, but is described as a kingdom, a banquet and a marriage. As Catherine of Siena said: "The saved will have a special participation with those whom they closely loved with deep affection in this world."

FOR JIM McKAY, Olympics sportscaster

Canada, known throughout the world for its hockey ability, participated in some of the Winter Olympics events but was not in the hockey competition. What's the story?—T. E. Zurawic, Midland, Mich.

● Canada refused to participate in the 1976 Winter Olympics hockey competition because of what they called the professionalism of the Soviet Union team. Sweden refused to participate for the same reason.

FOR DONNA FARGO, country-western singer

Are you related to the Wells Fargo people?—B. Dorman, Hartford, Ark.

● No. My real name is Yvonne Vaughn. I heard the name Donna Fargo, liked it and adopted it. I'm not related to the Wells Fargo Express Company, but wouldn't mind if I were! The only resemblance between us is that I've been fortunate enough to get some gold records since I began singing country music.

FOR BARBARA CARTLAND, English novelist

Is it true you've written more than 180 books? What makes your books so popular?—O.E.D., Trenton, N.J.

● To be exact, I've written 187. Why are they so popular? It's hard to say, unless it's a protest against pornography. All my heroines are virgins and "nicely brought up." Light reading, which my books are, should be fun and escapist. My readers like happy endings. I want to make sure they close the book feeling cheerful, not depressed.

FOR RICH LITTLE

Has another mimic ever become angry with you because of an impression you did?—Stephen Banks, Rockland, Mass.

● One night I happened to be coming out of a restaurant at the same time as David Frye, who does a very good Richard Nixon. He was quite upset as he snapped, "Stop doing my Nixon." I was surprised and blurted out, "President Nixon belongs to all of us!"

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Is Joe Namath really that close to his mother, or is it just a publicity stunt?—Jim Corman, Canton, Ohio

● Rose Namath Szolnoki says her son visits her at least six times a year. If there is an emergency (such as when she had surgery), he's right there. Joe behaves the same way toward his father (his parents were divorced 20 years ago), four brothers and sisters, nieces and nephews. Last year, Mrs. Szolnoki wrote a book, Namath, My Son Joe, and she also acts as Joe's secretary. (He pays her a salary.) She's fed up with all those stories about Joe's wild life. "They're not true," she complains, adding that what Joe likes best is the quiet life—sitting around over snacks and a glass of wine. She hopes he'll stop playing: "Whenever I see him on the field, I'm a nervous wreck. I always worry about his knees." And, like many mothers, she wants her son to settle down soon and marry.

INSIDE THE MIND OF A BRILLIANT CHILD

By Gloria Hochman

Lisa Stone is a brilliant teenager. Her I.Q. registers 150, which makes her a one-in-a-thousand exception. But, at 13, she doesn't bear much resemblance to the stereotyped, bespectacled recluse usually associated with high intelligence. She's pretty, popular, an excellent gymnast and a respected class leader at her suburban junior high school.

Yet Lisa is a "typical" gifted child. Her mother, Stephanie Stone, says there were clues about her specialness as far back as infancy. "Lisa always seemed precocious, even as a baby. She had an intense look about her whenever someone sang or talked to her, as though she were absorbing every word. She walked at 10 months and spoke in complete sentences when she was 1 year old. She also asked endless questions."

Before Lisa was 18 months old, she had memorized a half-dozen children's books. She could even piece together puzzles designed for 4-year-olds. And when she entered school at age 5, she was reading on a fifth-grade level.

There are two million children just like her across the country. But because of a few unfortunate circumstances, experts in psychology and education say many of them are "deprived, neglected, mistreated and misunderstood."

"Most people have serious misconceptions about the gifted child," says Dr. Bruce Boston, former coordinator of ERIC (Education Resources and Information Center), the clearing house for handicapped and gifted children in Reston, Va. "These children are pictured as being smug, pompous and arrogant—brainy, obnoxious kids, who, by some accident of fate, prefer a book to a baseball."

Nevertheless, many gifted children may be seriously short-changed. Often, they go unrecognized until they have reached kindergarten or first grade. When their special aptitudes and talents are noticed, chances are that little will be done about them. They become victims of what Harold C. Lyon, head of the U.S. Office of Gifted and Talented Education, calls "the cream always rises" myth. He says the faulty reasoning goes like this: "If they are really smart, they'll be able to get along on their own."

"The fact is that gifted children now achieve at a lower level than any other group," bristles Noretta Bingaman, Pennsylvania's supervisor for gifted programs. "They waste time and lose their capacity to learn. The greatest loss is in the early years where special programs for the gifted are fewest."

Identifying the gifted child may be the first and most serious challenge. Nora Cohen, coordinator of Philadelphia's program for the academically talented, says that observant parents can often spot giftedness long before the child enters school.

"Early speech is a frequent indicator...So is curiosity, a large vocabulary, a love of books, an exceptional memory and the desire to 'learn by myself.'"

Early speech is a frequent indicator, especially among girls. So is curiosity, a large vocabulary, a love of books, an exceptional memory and the desire to "learn by myself." Many seem to have an uncanny ability to concentrate for long periods of time and sometimes learn to read before they enter school.

Dorothy and Eli Fromm were aware that their son, Richard, now 7, was different. "He began to say words when he was 6 months old," his mother says. "Before long, he was writing the alphabet. He seemed to think in well-organized fashion. Before he was 3, he would keep charts and schedules of his activities and a calendar of events." Now in second grade, Richard has completed most of the third-grade work. He writes stories and has shown an aptitude for cartooning. Moreover, he is friendly, popular with his

IS YOUR CHILD GIFTED?

- Was your child an early talker or walker?
- Is he intellectually curious?
- Does he have a larger and more colorful vocabulary than other children his age?
- Does he have a longer attention span than other children his age?
- Is he original and ingenious?
- Does your child exhibit independent behavior?
- Does he have unconventional ideas?
- Does he seem to think logically and make sound judgments?
- Does he master physical activities easily?
- Does he learn on his own?
- Does he have a good memory?
- Is he well organized?
- Are his drawings rich in detail?
- Does he enjoy reading or being read to?

WHAT ALL PARENTS CAN DO

- Take the time to answer children's questions patiently.
- Expose them to a variety of experiences appropriate to their age and interests.
- Help them develop physical skills, such as ball-playing, bike-riding, ice-skating and swimming.
- Teach tolerance by setting an example.
- Treat each child as an individual and refrain from comparing him or her with siblings or friends.
- Do not use your gifted child as your status symbol; resist the desire to display him in public.
- Let your child make decisions commensurate with his ability.
- Do not praise your child if you do not mean it. He resents it.
- Permit your child to display his work in your home.
- Teach your child how to organize his time.
- Let your child know that you respect him and love him for himself and not for his intelligence.
- Set behavior limits and be consistent in enforcing them.
- Read to your child often.
- Do not overstructure his life. It is most important that your child have free time.

No one knows for sure whether these qualities reflect heredity or environment. Parents and the home atmosphere count heavily in stimulating giftedness. What's needed is a strong mother and father who love, appreciate, respect and trust their children and a home where there is harmony and sharing experiences. Playing games, entertaining friends, playing musical instruments and taking trips are especially conducive to intellectual development.

Kay Tomlinson, mother of a 7-year-old gifted daughter, says, "We do a lot together as a family. We play softball and take music lessons. Recently, we reproduced a Colonial weekend during which we shut off our heat, dipped candles, made a fire and dressed in Colonial costumes. We don't think much about it. It's just the way we live."

"Gifted children often come from nurturing homes," confirms Ms. Cohen, "and this does not necessarily mean wealthy homes. The parents have some common traits. They are supportive of their children and have encouraged them to learn. They have opened them to a world of experiences. That includes exploring the supermarket and the neighborhood park as well as visiting museums and theaters.

However, parents cannot do the job alone. And tragically, most schools are not equipped to deal with giftedness. Most gifted children are taught in regular classrooms by teachers who do not devote extra effort to them.

"What we do to gifted children is a crime against them and against society," says Ms. Bingaman. "A child comes to first grade reading on a high-school level and he is put into a pre-primer. Most of the day is repetition of things he already knows. The teacher writes him off. She tells him to keep himself busy while she works with the slow learner."

According to Ms. Bingaman, the price is staggering and often irrevocable. "Some children become so bored that they become behavior problems. Others sit back and daydream, and their minds get lazy. They become underachievers. Their gifted potential slowly shrivels until it is gone forever. And there is no way of knowing how many gifted children are lost in the system."

Ruth Kelly, mother of a 15-year-old boy who is creatively gifted—a divergent thinker with an I.Q. of 146—agrees. "From the time Gary was a toddler, we knew he was unique," she says. "A pencil was not just for writing. Food was not just for eating. Every piece of meat looked like a different country. When he learned how to walk down the steps, he never walked like other children. One step was a lake, and he had to swim across it. Another step was a mountain, and he had to march over it. He would never be satisfied with one answer to a question. And his room was unbelievable. There was no place for him to sleep. One week, he turned it into a cave. The next week, it was a railroad station.

"School was a disaster for Gary. It wasn't that he broke rules, but he couldn't sit still, and the teachers couldn't cope with his unconventional mind. He became labeled a weirdo, and before long, he stopped trying."

"School was a disaster for Gary. It wasn't that he broke rules, but he couldn't sit still, and the teachers couldn't cope with his unconventional mind. He became labeled a weirdo, and before long, he stopped trying. His drive, initiative and creativity were finally crushed. Today he wants to be exactly like everyone else. He wouldn't dare write a poem or paint a picture."

Schools that do have special programs for the gifted employ a number of techniques (from token programs to full-time curriculum) that have become the focus of scorching debate. Which is better—acceleration, enrichment, resource rooms, early admissions? Must teachers of the gifted have special training? Does skipping a grade help or hurt?

There are no clear-cut answers. It is felt, however, that traditional treatment of gifted youngsters—letting them skip a grade level or giving them more work with the theory that "more is better"—is not adequate or beneficial. Gifted children need to have their thinking processes developed and need to learn the skills necessary for independent learning and research.

It is generally agreed that the type of teachers who work with the gifted is crucial. They must be secure enough and mature enough not to be threatened by children who are often "one up on them." They must also be flexible and must love and understand children.

Educators point out that parents have been significant in developing programs for the gifted. Many states offer parents the right of due process (a hearing by its state board of education) if they are not satisfied with the program offered by their child's school.

"Only if parents exercise this right and insist on better education for their children, will programs for the gifted improve," advises Ms. Bingaman.

"It is not only the future of the gifted child that is at stake," emphasizes one educator. "The future of the whole country depends on this slender group of youngsters. They are our scientists, lawyers, artists, doctors. They are the ones who have the power to solve the menacing problems of our country. It is a question of survival. You might say that our society is in a lifeboat and that it is going to be up to these people to pull the oars." FW

HOLLYWOOD'S SULTRY "SURVIVOR"

How does a nice Southern gal manage to scale the heights of stardom, plummet to the depths of despair, yet come up a two- time Oscar nominee who refuses to be typecast?

By Patricia Baum

Ginsberg/Transworld

After "Bonnie and Clyde," Faye found success empty.

She's rumored to sleep until noon, throw temper tantrums and cry like a hurt child. Jack Nicholson called her "a little nuts." Director Roman Polanski claimed she "diplayed psychotic behavior," was "totally irrational" and had "demonstrated certifiable proof of insanity."

Faye Dunaway indeed evokes the classic image of the vulnerable and volatile star—the kind that might scare off producers. Yet in an era in which female stars have all but vanished, Faye Dunaway is a hot survivor. Her sultry and smoldering good looks have electrified the screen, stage and television in a variety of emotion-packed roles, and Faye has escaped the frustrations of typecasting that most actresses face. She's known best for her portrayals of the gun-toting and cigar-puffing bank robber in "Bonnie and Clyde" and the women of mystery in "Chinatown," both of which brought her Oscar nominations. Compulsively driven to expand her range, Faye has recently taken on the challenges of playing the controversial evangelist, Aimee McPherson, in the N.B.C. film, "The Disappearance of Aimee." She also portrays a ruthless and ambitious woman in "Network," and a sensuous and sophisticated doctor's wife in "Voyage of the Damned." In January she'll tackle a film based on the life of the colorful feminist, Victoria Woodhull.

With such accomplishments, can her tempestuous reputation be deserved? Meeting Faye is a pleasant surprise, for she projects a natural beauty and simple sensuality rather than bold theatrical glamour. The classic features —high cheekbones and luminous wide-set eyes—are prominent and exquisite. She is dressed smartly in purple slacks and a lavender blouse. Her slightly disheveled brown hair is pulled back into a barrette, and she displays no trace of makeup. When Faye speaks, her hands are in constant motion, giving impact and sincerity to her words.

She tends to avoid the press and is a bit uptight for openers. She stresses at once that she wants to talk only about her films. Reluctantly, she yields to a question about her vulnerability and says with a sigh, "I hate labels because people are always so much more complex. Yes, I'm sensitive, especially to rudeness—to having directors manipulate me, push me around and treat me like a child. But I'm also a very strong person. There is strength in having feelings and not cutting them off."

Reminded of her mercurial reputation, Faye insists she was temperamental only in the "Chinatown" filming. "I was convinced," she explains, "that Polanski disliked me, especially when he once jerked some hair out of my head. Because I took everything personally, I was constantly fighting back and screaming."

She found the situation so upsetting that she spent three months analyzing it and finally concluded that Polanski did not, in fact, dislike her, but was harsh because he was under great pressure. From the "Chinatown" experience, Faye believes, "I've come to realize it is my responsibility to help relieve tension and create a pleasant atmosphere on a set."

Faye concedes that some problems could stem from her desire for perfection. Weeks before the cameras grind, she's struggling to breathe life into her character—poring through books, drawing on her own experiences and going to agonizing lengths to look the part. To appear lean and tense for "Bonnie and Clyde," she went on a grim diet of grapefruit and hard-boiled eggs and staggered about with sand weights attached to her wrists and waist. And once filming is under way, no detail escapes her. Each morning while working on "A Place for Lovers," Faye spent three hours on her makeup, applying each lower eyelash hair by hair. When not before the cameras, Faye stays faithfully glued to the rushes, pondering how much emoting is best for a particular lens.

"In fact," Faye admits with a laugh, "often I immerse myself in the part more than is

At 231 pounds, I thought I'd be fat for life. Then I lost 111 pounds.

By Barbara Koehn—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

The one thing in my life I'd always wanted to do was to become a nurse. But I did three other things first. I got married, had children, and ate myself up to 231 pounds.

Putting on that weight was quite easy for me. Each morning, I simply opened my mouth when I opened my eyes and didn't stop eating until I went to bed. Bread, pizzas, spaghetti, submarine sandwiches, pop, candy — I ate everything in sight.

By the time my first son was born, I'd gone from 140 to 194 pounds, which made it a hard birth. I was in labor for a day and a half.

When I went home from the hospital, I immediately made up my mind to stop gorging myself and lose weight. And so I began endless efforts with crash diets, reducing pills, weekly diet sessions and just plain willpower to take off all those extra pounds.

The result? After two more children, I was heavier than ever. In fact, when I finally went into training, I wore the biggest uniform on the floor—24½. No wonder my supervisor in obstetrics wouldn't let me teach nutrition to new mothers. After all, how could I teach others what I hadn't learned myself.

Of course, as a nurse, I should have known better than to let my appetite run wild. But I was human and had my weaknesses. Like when I prepared meals for my children and husband, I ate extra things and always what I knew I shouldn't.

Then one day, I watched an operation on an extremely heavy woman. She had so many layers of fat, it's a wonder she hadn't had a heart attack. After seeing her, I really got serious about my own weight problem. I ruled out diet pills, however, as they'd always made me nervous in the past. Yet I was desperate enough to consider an intestinal bypass. But I gave up that and settled on the Ayds plan. It just seemed like such a sensible way to lose weight—without drugs. Besides, I'd read that Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy contains vitamins and minerals, so I bought a box at our local store in Huntington Woods, MI.

I took one or two Ayds 15 minutes before meals with a hot drink and they really helped satisfy my appetite. I found myself eating less without any strain. Naturally, I took in fewer calories, so I lost weight.

Thanks to the Ayds plan, I actually lost 111 pounds and all my bad eating habits. I just couldn't have been happier, especially since I knew I wouldn't have to be fat for the rest of my life.

At 231 pounds, I was so big, I didn't even bother to cover up my fat arms.

FAYE DUNAWAY

Faye's identification with her characters can bring her flashes of insight into her own life. In the N.B.C. film, for instance, Aimee McPherson rebels against her mother, yet at the end yields to her influence. "Although she was totally dominated by her mother and I wasn't," explains Faye, "this scene struck a common chord, and I realized more fully the extent of my mother's influence on me."

Faye was born about 36 years ago in Bascom, Fla. Because her father was a career Army man, they lived for short periods in Arkansas, Utah, Texas and Germany, and Faye acquired an "appetite for adventure and change but not for forming strong ties." A beautiful child, Faye was fussed over and pampered endlessly, dressed up like Shirley Temple and provided with ballet, tap, piano and voice lessons. Faye credits her mother with giving her the "gift of aspiration. She didn't try to turn me into the typical Southern belle, but made me believe that by working hard and applying myself I could excel in anything I chose and be more than just a wife or mother. And she instilled in me the American dream—that if you have two cars in the garage, you are successful and therefore happy."

Fired with ambition, Faye studied drama at Boston University and then in New York and pursued success obsessively. It arrived quickly, after Faye overcame her one major obstacle: she could not do deeply emotional scenes because she could not cry on stage. Coach Elia Kazan convinced her "that you should not be ashamed to show your feelings; that's your identity." Faye immediately burst into tears and achieved a breakthrough. After a few Broadway parts, she was given a crack at films. Her third one, "Bonnie and Clyde," made Faye an overnight star and hiked her salary from $30,000 to $300,000.

But success was disappointing. "It was so empty," she says bluntly. "Sure, it gave me some benefits, like the freedom to choose my own films and working conditions. But I was the same person and not very happy because I had been neglecting my personal life."

Bolstered by psychoanalysis, which helped her sort out the real Faye from Faye the Movie Star, she flung herself into a series of relationships. And in doing so she gave gossip columnists a field day, especially during her affair with Marcello Mastroianni, which ended after a heated argument in an Italian hotel room. About these blonde glamour-girl days, Faye says reflectively, "None of these relationships was fulfilling. I think I was too dependent on men and afraid they would abandon me, probably because my parents were divorced when I was 13, and I missed having a father around."

Meanwhile Faye's career stagnated as she repeatedly chose films that were neither critical nor box-office successes.

With "Chinatown" came the resurrection of her screen career. And at about the same time, with her marriage to Peter Wolf, lead singer with the J. Geils Band, she filled the void in her personal life. "I don't think anyone expected me to get married," she says. "Even my father-in-law kidded, 'Aren't you the rebellious one?' The truth is I wasn't against marriage. I waited until I was 34 because I was afraid to make the mistake my parents did and wanted to be sure I picked just the right man."

With Peter, who is a few years her junior, Faye is convinced she has found Mr. Right. "I've become much more self-sufficient. And Peter is a very mature man with a healthy ego. He doesn't feel threatened by my work, although I'm sure it helps that he is a singer rather than an actor."

After years of emotional floundering, Faye feels secure enough in her marriage to contemplate starting a family. "I would definitely like to have a child in the next couple of years," she says softly. "And I don't delude myself—I know it's the biggest responsibility I could undertake and would involve curbing my acting."

Faye's voice contains a note of achievement. And when she vows not to do anything to jeopardize her marriage, one senses that "crazy" Faye has been evolving into a more level-headed woman who's certainly pointing herself into the right direction.

"Merit Delivers More Taste Than Higher Tar Cigarettes."

–American Institute of Consumer Opinion

Extensive taste testing shows MERIT delivers flavor of cigarettes having 60% more tar.

The bottom line was conclusive:
In a series of taste tests conducted for MERIT by the American Institute of Consumer Opinion*, smokers from across the country judged MERIT to have more flavor than five leading low tar cigarette brands.

What's really startling—and of major importance to all smokers—is that MERIT has less tar than these five brands.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL

Less tar. Yet more taste.
That's the report on a remarkable new taste process called 'Enriched Flavor.' A way to pack extra flavor into tobacco without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now smoke the cigarette. MERIT.

AN AMERICAN HERITAGE BUFFET

A Thanksgiving dinner to serve with pride features: Shellfish Gumbo Z'Herbes, Glazed Carrots-Fine Herbes, Cole Slaw, Colache, Dutch Rice Apples, Boston Brown Bread, Grapefruit and Avocado Salad, Southern Fried Chicken and Corn Fritters.

Historically, the cuisine of the United States has been as varied as its landscape, since the people of each region developed unique dishes to take advantage of native ingredients.

During this Bicentennial year, guests have been introduced to the goodness of American regional cuisine at international festivals celebrated in hotels as far away as London, Cairo and Hong Kong. The festivals have highlighted recipes from New England, Virginia, New Orleans, Pennsylvania, The Great West, California and The Gay Nineties era. Our Buffet contains recipes from each – making a coast-to-coast food celebration.

A Thanksgiving Menu From the "Food Olympics"

By Marilyn Hansen/Food Editor

A menu based on native American foods, one of eight submitted by the U.S. culinary team for the 1976 International Culinary Competition.

In the athletics world, there is the Olympics. And in the food world there is the International Culinary Competition. This year the competition was held October 21-28 in Frankfurt, Germany.

Teams from 25 countries competed this year. Each prepared four menus reflecting its nation's cookery. The U.S. team chose "The Spirit of '76" as its menu theme.

Kraft Foods

New England Pilgrim's Kettle, a tasty pork stew, is served in a baked acorn squash. Wild Rice Patties, Cold Fresh Cranberry Soup and Skillet Pudding complement this "Spirit of '76" menu.

Miracle Brand Margarine is whipped. Which means more pats per pound. 36 more, to be exact. And that's enough to spread two extra loaves of bread at 18 slices per loaf.

Enjoy collecting a stirring panorama of U.S. history

Postal Commemorative Society members receive everything they need to build and maintain a personalized "perfect condition" collection of U.S. First Day Covers. For each cover issued, the Society provides an exclusive custom designed display page, especially made for the member's personalized album.

The United States regularly honors the important men, events and places in its history through the issuance of official U.S. commemorative postage stamps. When a new stamp is to be issued, one, and only one, post office is designated to provide the official "First Day" cancellation. The specially designed envelope bearing the new stamp, cancelled with the exact date of first issue of the officially designated post office, is a First Day Cover.

First Day Covers are fascinating collectors' items. As you can well imagine, the combination of an historic stamp, cancelled with the "First Day of Issue" postmark of the officially designated post office on a specially designed envelope, results in a collector's item of the first order. One that has been prized by collectors like Dwight D. Eisenhower, George C. Marshall and Franklin D. Roosevelt, plus others with the foresight to preserve yesterday and today for tomorrow.

The best time to obtain these prized collectors' items is when they are issued. This is now made easier than ever by the Postal Commemorative Society.

First Day Covers combine art and history in a tribute to our American heritage. Eisenhower . . . the Battle of Bunker Hill . . . the writing of the Star-Spangled Banner . . . the landing of astronauts on the moon . . . such are the subjects chosen by the United States for national honor on commemorative postage stamps.

The post office chosen for a first day of issue usually bears particular significance to the subject commemorated. For example, a first day cover of the 1976 Benjamin Franklin stamp bears the "First Day of Issue" postmark of Philadelphia, Pa.

The nation's leading artists and designers are called upon to portray the subjects chosen. Such commissions naturally are highly prized, and bring forth the best efforts of the artists involved.

Membership in the Postal Commemorative Society makes it possible to easily collect First Day Covers as they are issued. The Society will guarantee your receiving a personally addressed First Day Cover for each new U.S. commemorative stamp issue. All details of arranging for your First Day Covers to be sent to you will be handled by the Society.

Commemorative stamps normally are issued by the United States at the rate of one every three to four weeks. You will receive a beautiful First Day Cover for every United States commemorative stamp issue during the term of your membership at a total cost of just $1.50 per issue.

As a member, at no additional cost, you will also receive the Society's exclusive display page for each new issue. Each beautiful, specially designed page is diecut to hold the First Day Cover, and contains a full description with all important historical information about the subject of the commemorative issue. These pages are available only to members of the Society.

At the surprisingly low cost of $1.50 per issue, you will be building a truly worthwhile First Day Cover collection to be enjoyed now and preserved for future generations of your family. Shouldn't you really give it a try?

Becoming a member now brings you an important collector's bonus at no additional cost. The Postal Commemorative Society makes available to each new member a handsome collector's album with the member's name hand-embossed on the cover. This album, specially designed to hold the Society's display pages, makes it possible for members to keep each new First Day Cover in perfect condition. It is yours free, if you join now!

7. Cook carrots and onions together in boiling salted water, then drain. Cook peas according to package directions and drain.

8. Add cooked vegetables to pork stew. Just before serving, stir in pickled baby corn, reserving a few for garnish.

9. Fill hot acorn squash "kettles" with hot pork stew and garnish with tiny corn and chopped parsley. Place lid of squash "kettle" on top.

10. To keep hot, reheat in 325° F. oven or serve immediately with Wild Rice Patties (recipe follows). Makes 4 servings

TONI'S TOSTADAS—

A Meal That's Fit For the Captain's Table

Toni Tennille and Daryl Dragon, starring in ABC-TV's new show, "The Captain and Tennille," are strict vegetarians. Their pet bulldogs, following suit, are semivegetarians.

By the Captain and Tennille

In conversation with Helen Dorsey

Daryl Dragon and Toni Tennille, TV's new comedy team, claim to be "lacto-vegetarians"—meaning they eat plenty of dairy products, such as cheese, milk and eggs and lots of fresh vegetables. They've even gone so far as to make semivegetarians out of their pet bulldogs, Elizabeth and Broderick (named after actor Broderick Crawford).

DARYL: I remember the time I became a vegetarian: It was after I discovered I had gout, and the doctor, telling me not to worry, prescribed special pills. Somehow, that didn't seem quite right, so I began studying different types of diets. I was impressed by some of the things I read about eating natural foods and their effects on the body, and I decided to give the natural foods regimen a try (with my doctor's blessing). I've dropped certain things from my diet, foods containing refined flour, sugar and additives, for instance. Toni and I eat much like people did a century ago—and we can't get over how great we feel!

TONI: We like vegetables steamed or lightly sautéed, huge salads laden with protein-rich sunflower seeds or pumpkin seeds, bits of cheese, hard-cooked eggs and herbs. I find I can whip up meals—like tacos or tostadas—in a hurry, and still please nonvegetarian friends who come for dinner. Guacamole is a favorite of ours because we love avocados, and lentils spiced with cumin and chili powder make a terrific hearty filling.

By the way, lentils are an

Have You A Black Elephant Standing in Your Living Room?

How to play the piano despite years of lessons

. . . and whether or not you've had lessons, an amazing breakthrough shows you how

. . . to make your own music easily without wasting time on scales and exercises

. . . to sit down immediately and play popular songs, folk songs, hymns, Christmas carols, rock, swing, jazz, you name it

Of Course You Can Be Successful

Imagine sitting down at the piano and having fun making music—popular songs, folk songs, hymns, Christmas carols, swing, jazz, whatever you like—as easily as you "make" music with your radio, tape recorder or record player. You can! And it's even easier than you ever dreamed possible.

Believe it or not, you have within you a unique mechanism that enables you to make music—immediately. This revolutionary new approach shows you how to release this mechanism whether you've had years of lessons (and still can't play) or have never dared touch the piano before. As soon as you sit down, you'll be making music—show tunes, popular songs, old favorites, hymns, carols, folk songs and more will come to you almost as if by magic! And we're so certain this instant approach works, we guarantee you'll see results right away without risking a cent!

Unlocking the Secret

Ward Cannel is an award winning journalist and nonmusician. He was mystified by the fact that he could be given an assignment to write about the atomic bomb, and within three weeks understand its structure. But over 30 million people own a far less complicated instrument, the piano, and still can't play it (often after years of study). Why? His investigation led him to discoveries that enabled him to play the piano himself—something he had never been able to do before—and show you how to do it, too!

Together with Fred Marx, a conservatory trained professional musician and teacher who was also dissatisfied with traditional training—scales, exercises, practicing, rote learning—they tackled the mystery. And what they found is startling:

Most people think they've had years of music lessons when what they've really had is years of instrument lessons—years of rote learning and touch-typing at the keyboard. Often, that approach can literally block your natural ability to make music.

But there is in your mind a childishly simple mechanism which permits you to make music easily, automatically. It's been making music for you since you were born (witness the fact that babies recognize lullabys long before they can make any sense out of words or sentences.)

The secret of this new approach will show you how to release what you already know and thus connect your fingers to your mind. In other words, what you have known instinctively all along will become what you can do easily and naturally. You'll go directly to any keyboard and make music right from the start!

End intimidation of scales, exercises forever

Once you see how easy it is to use something you've always known intuitively, you'll apply that knowledge on the keyboard. Immediately! Whether you're six or sixty, you'll be creating your own music with the tunes you like best, making much more music than the sheet music provides, improvising when you want to, and above all, you'll be expressing yourself through the magic of music.

You'll see the few simple facts (that when) put together are called music. You'll see the almost magical formula which makes the basic chord. You'll see the skeleton that holds all music together . . . a simple, basic structure you will build on your own piano in a matter of days.

For the first time you'll see what seem to be the mysterious minor, diminished and augmented chords suddenly laid out for easy understanding and use.

In the same way, you'll be using the four-note chords as easily as you use a knife and fork. And suddenly you'll see that arpeggios, counter-melodies, cocktail music and boleros are all the simple basic skeleton of music dressed in different ways . . . this and much, much more!

Instead of the torture of sitting down to practice and rote learning, you'll open whole new worlds of music each time you touch the keys. In short, you'll be making music—with both hands—right from start.

Even If You've Never Had Any Piano Lessons

You, too, can be making music at the keyboard in almost no time at all. This approach shows you how music is made so that you can make your own. All you have to know is the names of the lines and spaces of the treble clef. And you probably know that and much, much more if you've ever fooled around with the guitar, the recorder, the violin, the electric organ, a band instrument, or any musical instrument at all.

No Risk Guarantee . . .

Experience the joy—to say nothing of the admiration and recognition—of being able to make your own music wherever, whenever you want it. Turn that "black elephant" that's been sitting in your home gathering dust for years into the instrument for making music it was designed to be. Really get to know music (even if your goal is just to broaden your knowledge about the way music is made). And, above all, sit down and play the piano with both hands right away. Take advantage of this unique no risk offer: Order now, and whether you've studied for years (no matter how long ago), or whether you've never had a lesson in your life, YOU ARE GOING TO PLAY THE PIANO, AND LOVE EVERY MOMENT OF IT RIGHT AWAY! You must agree that it is all we promise or you can return immediately for full money back (except postage and handling).

You've been brainwashed

Here are some myths, half truths and obsolete beliefs that keep most people from ever trying to play the piano:

1. When it comes to music, either you have it or you don't. If you have it, you can make music. If you don't you can't. WRONG.

2. In order to make music, you have to know your scales and do your exercises fluently. It takes a year at the least—and closer to two—before your study pays off and you are prepared to play the piano. There are no short-cuts. WRONG.

3. Music is a very complicated study filled with rules and regulations which only a genius can understand. WRONG!

The truth is that every human being possesses the ability to make music. You were born with that power and now you are about to set it free! Now read how easy it is to play all the music you want to play in this startlingly simple new way to learn in just minutes a day!

Here are just a few of the great pieces You'll be making music with:

All Through the Day • If Ever I Would Leave You • Blueberry Hill • Look To The Rainbow • Close As Pages In A Book • (Our) Love Is Here To Stay • A Cottage For Sale • September Song • Eleanora • Show Me • Everything's Coming Up Roses • Some Enchanted Evening • Fanny • Someday I'll Find You • Gigi • Spellbound Concerto • Harbor Lights • This Can't Be Love • Haunted Heart • This Nearly Was Mine • How High The Moon • There's A Small Hotel • I Could Write A Book • True Love • I Can Dream, Can't I? • Try To Remember • I Love Paris • Where Or When • I'll Follow My Secret Heart • And More!

And that's just the beginning. You'll be playing semi-classics, old favorites, hymns, Christmas carols, folk songs—in fact practically anything you can think of but never dared dream you could play before.

Free! Big Extra Bonus

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

"Do people in a lower-income bracket with fewer material possessions have more friends?"

Is It Better to Be Rich?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Rich people are happier than the nonrich.
2. Rich people get all the lucky breaks.
3. Rich people's teeth don't last as long as other people's do.
4. How much pain you feel when you hurt yourself is likely to depend on your socio-economic status.
5. People in a lower-income bracket may have fewer material possessions than the more affluent, but they have more friends.

ANSWERS

1. False. Consensus of studies indicates that striving toward happiness—which is popularly thought of in terms of material success—is one of the most fundamental drives characterizing human life. And when, as so frequently happens, material success fails to bring the anticipated happiness, disillusionment and frustration result. Which is why many people are rich, bored and unhappy. And it's interesting to note in this connection that in psychological studies where men and women have been asked to name the time in their life when they were happiest and had the most zest for living, most named the years when the going was the toughest, when they had to struggle to make ends meet.

2. False. They don't get all of them by any means. If a person is in a situation in which something goes wrong with his car and he needs assistance, he's more likely to get a helping hand from a passer-by if he gives the appearance of not being very prosperous than if he looks like he's "got it made." For example, Florida State University investigators conducted an interesting experiment. Throughout an entire week of evenings they left a car, with the headlights on and the driver's window rolled down, parked in a downtown shopping center. And "the affluence of the owner was indicated by using either a 1974 gold Eldorado or a 1971 gray Mustang (high- and moderate-priced cars, respectively)." Public reaction—in terms of helpfulness and concern or indifference—is eloquently indicated by the results, reported as follows: the lights of the Mustang were turned off over twice as often (82 percent of the observation periods) as were the lights of the Eldorado (39 percent of the time).

3. True—as evidenced by the findings from a 10-state, tooth-by-tooth analysis of 10,000 young people, conducted by a University of Michigan research group. Results of the study indicated that malnutrition and low resistance to tooth decay did not show up among the least affluent but rather "among the more pampered youth. This was apparently the result of overindulgence in the wrong kind of food and poor eating habits." As the investigators note in their report to the International Association for Dental Research, it is reasonable to assume that frequency of contact with food—hovering around the pantry, constantly nibbling—may be the real culprit responsible for the higher tooth-decay rates among children from more affluent families.

4. True. Psychological research shows that pain thresholds vary with the individual—ranging from those who are comparatively insensitive to pain, to those who "hurt" at the slightest provocation. In studying socio-economic status and pain sensitivity, a dolometer was used to measure pain thresholds of 170 subjects from various walks of life, ranging in age from 12 to 83. Subjects were divided into two groups: those whose income and social status were in the higher-than-average brackets and those in the middle- or less-advantaged classes. Findings: pain thresholds of the higher socio-economic group were found to be much higher than the other group. That is to say, they were appreciably less sensitive to pain. It's suggested that a person's early experiences and general upbringing may predispose him "to react in certain ways to hurtful stimuli."

5. False. Sociological studies show that people in the higher-income brackets have more friends, are more social-minded, more neighborly and more active in clubs and organizations than the less well-to-do. It was found that "the number of close friends increases with the number of organizations with which membership is held." It's suggested that people in the lesser socio-economic brackets average fewer friends for a number of reasons: the struggle to make a living allows them less time for socializing; greater fatigue from harder physical exertion at work often leaves them too tired to go out; and there is often a lack of facilities for entertaining guests. ## Observations™

Dear bicentennial baby: Want to celebrate the tricentennial? You can improve the odds of living to 2076 if you:

- Get shots for preventable childhood diseases, such as measles and rubella. Incredibly, about one-third of all American children still are not immunized against these two serious ailments.
- Don't smoke. Despite warnings of lung cancer, heart trouble, and emphysema, cigarette consumption has risen by 4.8 billion packs since 1964, the year of the Surgeon General's report on the threat to health.
- Fasten your seat belt and slow down to 55 mph. The National Safety Council estimates that if all passenger car occupants wore seat belts at all times, 12,000 fatalities could be prevented annually. In addition, lower speed limits have saved some 20,000 lives in just three years.
- Watch what you eat. You can reduce the risk of heart disease and other ailments with a sensible diet, low in substances like animal fats.

By 2076, solar energy, nuclear fusion and other exotic energy sources will brighten your world. But you can improve the odds of living well until then if you conserve today's energy supplies. And support the search for more domestic oil and gas off America's coasts, plus the development of America's coal resources.

"CAN WE SEE WHERE YOU KEEP THE RED TAPE?"

Inscrutable Americans. We find it indeed mysterious that America, now dependent on overseas sources for 40% of its crude oil, delays so long in developing alternate energy sources. In Japan, for example, it requires only six years to bring a nuclear power plant from drawing board to operation, while in the U.S. it takes ten years.

Free speech. "Welcome to the wonderful world of toll free numbers!" exults the Toll Free Digest. So far this year, over 300,000 copies of the $2 Digest have been sold. It's a directory of 2,500 or so "800" telephone numbers, mostly in the travel and leisure fields, that people can call long distance without charge.

Interested in coin collecting, or Chinese acupuncture? Need some steel? Want to join the Army, Navy, Air Force? How about the Peace Corps? Need help with a drinking problem? Or to track a runaway youngster? Toll free numbers can assist in all these areas, and more. In fact, the phone company has signed up 70,000 customers for toll free lines in less than ten years.

The Digest can be purchased from the Toll Free Digest Company, Inc., Box 800, Claverack, N.Y. 12513. One more thing: Our Mobil Travel Guides also list a couple of "800" numbers, just so travelers can be sure of a bed at the end of a day's trip. Try 800-323-1776 (800-942-8888 for Illinois only) for instant hotel/motel room reservations 24 hours a day. And sleep well.

PEOPLE AND YOU

Cranky Dads: A New Solution

Dad's been hard to live with lately. He refuses to help the children with their homework, he slams the table with his fist when someone in the family crosses him—he's just plain cranky. Could be job problems, health, a lot of things. Then again, It could be the kind of TV programs he's been watching. For years, psychiatrists have suspected that adults are as susceptible as children to TV's up or down mood-effects. Recently psychiatrist Roderic Gorney of U.C.L.A. and two associates tested the theory, not in a laboratory but in people's homes. One group of volunteers was assigned a steady diet of TV violence. Another group was ordered to stick to "helpful" programs like "Medical Center," "Little House on the Prairie," "Lucas Tanner." Group No. 3 was assigned light entertainment; group No. 4, a mix of helpful and violent programs, and group No. 5 received complete freedom to choose what it wished. The viewers then recorded their feelings. Their wives were independently interviewed about their husbands' behavior during the TV test period. The men who viewed helpful programs reported a noticeable drop in their aggressive feelings as the week of the experiment progressed. The violence watchers reported no such relief. Most important, the wives declared that group No. 1, the violence-viewing men, was the crankiest and most antagonistic. Of all five groups, the viewers of "helpful" programs turned out to be the easiest to live with. You might want to try a little experiment of your own and see whether, in your house, less TV violence produces fewer cranky people.

JOBMANSHIP

Asking for That Raise

You're unhappy about your pay and you've made up your mind to say something. To increase your chances for success, try to look at yourself, your employer and your bargaining position as the boss will. Automation, a business-engineering publication, recently produced a major report on salaries. Its conclusions would apply to anyone in any job. Things to consider: 1) Are you really worth a raise? Face the fact that a particular job is worth only so much to an employer. Have you already reached the upper pay limit for that work? "Routine paper-shuffling simply does not command the salary paid for stomach-churning duties on the firing line." 2) How's business, and has your company been growing? If the answer is, "Business is great and we have been growing," it's sensible for you to expect to share the success. But many people ignore their employer's financial condition and plow ahead with their demands. If the company is having a rough time or has hit a stagnant period, is it realistic for you to expect your personal income to be boosted? 3) Have your duties and responsibilities increased since your last raise? Any significant added duty is a specific extra contribution you can mention when asking for a raise. 4) Has your employer fallen into the careless habit of exploiting willing, productive employees (you, for instance) and handing out equal pay for distinctly unequal performance? If so, you may have a strong case if you handle it properly. In a quiet talk with the boss, present yourself "as the earnest employee simply making a reasonable inquiry." Have a well-thought-out list of your contributions to the organization and put forth your case pleasantly. Do not appear indignant. And never issue threats or ultimatums—they may turn the discussion away from salary and direct it toward talk of a mutually agreeable termination date.

MONEY

Talking to Kids About Family Finances

"We never talk about money in front of the children," some parents proudly say. But according to experts this may be one of the biggest mistakes you can make. Parents usually give three main reasons why they try to shield youngsters from the financial facts of life: 1) We don't want them to know how much (or how little) money we have. "Nonsense!" says New York psychotherapist Louis Ormont. "Any reasonably clever youngster can figure that out by comparing his family's lifestyle to that of his friends' families. Keeping the facts secret only tends to create suspicion or anxiety. If parents try to conceal their prosperity, a youngster may develop guilt about being well-off. If parents try to pretend they aren't poor, a youngster may come to feel that being poor is somehow shameful. 2) We don't want our children to know that we have arguments over money. The kids will probably know anyway—especially if parents conduct their squabbles in hushed whispers behind closed doors. And Houston therapist Donald Williamson observes that youngsters can benefit from seeing how parents work out their conflicts: "Negotiation that leads to resolution is a fantastic learning experience for children," he says. 3) Children don't understand about money problems and decisions, so why confuse them? Well, as long as family finances are kept under cover, children never will understand. And they'll continue to be confused, perhaps, when they grow up and have their own money decisions to face. None of this means children must be given a detailed picture of a family's financial situation or a dollars-and-cents balance sheet. But they should have a broad outline of the family's financial picture so they can comprehend questions that are related to their own experiences—such as what kind of vacation to take, how much to spend on family Christmas gifts and so on.

LAUGHS

As a result of a bitter argument, husband and wife were not speaking to each other. Upon retiring for the night, the husband handed his wife a terse note which read: "Call me at seven in the morning."

When he awoke, it was nine. As he hurried to dress, he noticed a note beside his own: "It's seven." —Anne Dirkman

A Czechoslovakian who had just arrived in New York City was having trouble with his eyes. He went to an ophthalmologist who pointed to a chart and asked, "Can you read the bottom line?"

"Read it?" cried the Czech. "Why I know him!" —Conrad Fiorello

While rummaging through his attic, a man found a shoe-repair ticket that was nine years old. Assuming that he had nothing to lose, he went to the shop and presented the ticket to the proprietor, who reluctantly began a search for the unclaimed shoes. After 10 minutes, the owner reappeared and handed back the ticket.

"Well," asked the customer, "did you find the shoes?"

"Yes," replied the shop owner. "They'll be ready tomorrow." —Conrad Fiorello

THE ART OF LIVING– AND STAYING YOUNG

A sage once wrote: "You are as young as your hope, as old as your despair."

By John Cameron Swayze

John Cameron Swayze has been a noted radio and television news commentator for more than 40 years. He is also an accomplished writer and sometime TV actor. His awards include the Legion of Honor.

George Bernard Shaw once said that if the other planets are inhabited then the world must be their lunatic asylum. I don't go that far. It's a troubled place, but I still think it's a wonderful world for those of us who freely practice the art of living. And it is an art. I think to practice it successfully you should be conscious of certain helpful qualities.

Consider quick thinking and the art of the apt retort. I mean like Al Smith had them. In his day, politicians faced the public in person, there wasn't any television and not much of what he was pleased to call the "raddio." Smith was on the platform haranguing a crowd one day when a heckler shouted, "Tell 'em all you know, Al, it won't take long." Smith scarcely paused for breath as he shouted back, "I'll tell 'em all we both know—it won't take any longer."

Somehow you don't expect the same sort of thing from an industrial tycoon. But Detroit auto magnate Walter Chrysler had the gift. He lost a ten-dollar bet to a friend one time. As Chrysler gave him a ten-dollar bill, the friend said, "You know, Walter, I'm going to give this to my grandson. He'll frame it." "You mean he won't spend it?" asked Chrysler. "No indeed, he'll want it as a souvenir," said the friend. "In that case," said Chrysler, grabbing the bill, "I'll just send him a check."

A refusal to submit to old age is, I think, important beyond exaggeration. That boogeyman, Old Age, is a pet peeve of mine. Look at Pablo Casals. He continued giving concerts into his nineties, and he practiced every day. Someone asked him why, and he said, "Because I think I'm making progress." That's the spirit we want.

We need to remember that Noah Webster was 70 when he produced his dictionary. Jules Verne was 70 and more when he wrote those great imaginative stories. Gladstone was still going strong in political and intellectual circles at 80. Douglas MacArthur had an essay about age on his office wall. Here's an excerpt:

> "Youth is not a time of life, it is a state of mind. You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubts—as young as your self-confidence, as old as your fear—as young as your hope, as old as your despair."

Another quality that helps us in the art of living is that grand gift, a sense of humor. It helps smooth the rough spots in the day, often turns aside flashes of temper. A genius of the past, Michelangelo, is an example. His sense of humor was a handy asset one day when he was working on the altar wall in the Vatican's Sistine Chapel. The magnificent mural shows Christ in upper center admitting some people to paradise and consigning others to darkness. Today you will see down in one corner of that masterpiece the naked figure of a man, with two horns on his head and a snake around his middle. The face on the figure is that of a cardinal, a contemporary of Michelangelo. This was not in the original design.

The cardinal came in one day when the artist was at work and criticized the painting, saying the people didn't have on enough clothes. Michelangelo was a man of spirit, and his temper flared, but before it could get out of hand his sense of humor took over.

Time passed, and the cardinal came in again. He studied the work, then suddenly saw himself, naked, horns on head, snake around his middle, down in hell over in the right-hand corner. Furious, he rushed out, returned with the pope, and called on the pontiff to assess punishment. The pope looked, pondered, but he, too, had a sense of humor. Presently, he turned to the cardinal and said solemnly, "My son, had you asked me anything on this earth, I would have given it to you. But now [he pointed], now that you are in the other world, I can do nothing." The cardinal is still there.

We need confidence, too, the kind of confidence John Glenn exhibited on the target range in his Army days. A gunnery sergeant asked him where his last shot had hit. "I don't know," replied Glenn, "but when it left here, it was a bull's-eye."

William James said, "Be not afraid of life. Believe that life is worth living, and your belief will help create the fact." In short, believe you can do it, and you're already part-way to your goal, success in the art of living. FW

CHIA-CHIA
Try a little tenderness

Panda Chia-Chia is the bad boy of the London Zoo. Not long ago, he was part of the crowd-pulling double act with the zoo's other giant panda, Ching-Ching. But for some time, the two have been kept in separate cages because Chia-Chia's bold advances led to fighting. Now he is merely allowed a weekly visit to Ching-Ching's cage under the watchful eye of a keeper. And, so far, he's been badly put down by the offended lady panda. Here, Chia lets a rumbling snarl of unrequited passion escape him. The zoo still hopes that the friendship will develop again and that the pair will mate next year.

MIKHAIL BARYSHNIKOV
A dance against gravity

You've probably been hearing whispers about Mikhail Baryshnikov the wonder-boy of ballet. He defected from Russia to the United States in 1974 and has since been winning the West with his energy and one-of-a-kind technical skill. What makes Misha (as his friends and co-workers call him) possibly the greatest dancer in the world? Choreographer John Butler had this to say: "One day I was working on the jumps and elevations for a ballet, and I said jokingly, 'Misha, do a jump and change directions four times before you land,' and he did it. 'All right John?' he said to me, was that okay?' 'All right? That's inhuman!' I said to him. 'You don't know what you did!' He is extraordinary. I have never known a dancer who can do what he can. Like many dancers, he loves to investigate. But he has the power to investigate in the air!"

If parents wish to divorce, when is the time least traumatic to children? According to Dr. Jack Westman, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Wisconsin, there are consequences at every age. "Generally, divorce has its greatest impact between the ages of 3 and 7 years and runs the biggest chance of being misunderstood," the psychiatrist said. "And this, unfortunately, is the age span of most children experiencing their parents' divorce. During these early years, youngsters tend to blame themselves for the breakup and feel the departing parent has rejected them. They often find the 'proof' for their culpability in the arguments parents have over child-care support and behavior. Furthermore, between the ages of 3 and 7, children fashion their sense of self and their personality through interaction with their mothers, fathers and siblings. This is the time when both boys and girls need their fathers most, and when the father is gone, it can have a profound effect on a child's gender identification." Children and divorce are among the subjects discussed in Ruth Winter's book, "The Fragile Bond: Marriage Now" (Macmillan, $7.95).

How do Americans compare with Russians? A survey by the National Federation of Independent Business turned up these shocking facts: For a breadwinner to buy a week's groceries for a family of four, the American worker must put in 17.2 hours; the Russian, 64.6 hours. Average hourly take-home pay for American manufacturing workers was $3.83, compared with $1.10 for Soviet workers. Americans, on a per capita basis, have 11 times as many telephones as the Russians. On the other hand, the Russians read more daily newspapers than the Americans. The average American farmer can feed 49 persons, while a Soviet farmer can feed only seven. And, in what may come as a surprise to some, Soviet defense expenditures were more than $9 billion higher in 1975 than those in the United States. The Soviet military budget consumed nearly $89 billion, or 10.5 percent of that nation's gross national product, compared with 6.2 percent of G.N.P. for the U.S.

Superstars at a disadvantage on TV? Noted TV director George Schaeffer explains: "If you use the big superstars like Glenn Ford, Shirley MacLaine or Julie Andrews, they can only be themselves. Someone like Carroll O'Connor, however, who was a great actor for years, was virtually unknown outside of the industry. He was so right for the Archie Bunker part, that now he has become that person in the public's mind. In addition, if a TV series succeeds, you are asking for the actor to commit himself for three to four years. Chances are that superstars and those who are just breaking into the big feature market won't want to get tied down doing a series; so for this type of role, you're much more likely to get actors and actresses who like a permanent situation but aren't yet household words."

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

FOUR AND AGAINST

The two-door car, to tell the truth,
Is sleek and sporty, built for youth.
But as one stiffens in the spine
And in the knees, it's not so fine.
The four-door has more doors to close,
More rattles, also, I suppose.
It has more windows needing washing,
Removing spots, too, after sloshing.
But comes a time, this there's no doubt of,
It's better getting in and out of.

A woman who lived alone had an urge to cook a rabbit stew when she saw a rabbit displayed in a butchershop window. Since the rabbit was too large for one person, she asked the butcher if she could buy just half of it.

"I'm sorry," he replied, "we don't split hares."

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

Kids see life differently. Send original contributions to "Child," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10022. $10 if used—none returned.

My 4-year-old neighbor Priscilla was paying a morning call. I was serving orange juice, and she asked me to let her pour it from the pitcher. I told her she would spill it—which she did. Whereupon she said to me wistfully, "Oh, Mary, I'm having my childhood."

DEAR POLLY — I use a child's rake to clean the leaves from under bushes. A regular rake often gets caught in the branches. — H.M.O.

DEAR POLLY — You can make a doll stand with one of those new-type potato chip canister cans. Cut away all excess cardboard except two inches along the back from top to bottom, but be sure the top and bottom stay attached to this remaining cardboard. The stand can be papered or painted. — MRS. H.E.

DEAR POLLY — I have arthritis, so it is sometimes quite painful to bend over. When cleaning, I use a child's plastic snow shovel instead of a dustpan. — M.H.

DEAR POLLY — When embroidering I find it easier to thread my needle and then stick it in a pincushion to knot the thread. — KIM.

DEAR POLLY — Here's a neat way to alter the length of the skirt to a two-piece dress: Let the hem out at the waistband and face it instead of the skirt hem. This looks much nicer, as the hem is left intact. — C.A.L. (Polly's note: This is great when the skirt is cut straight and does not slope in too much at the waist. If tucks had been made at the waist and over the hips, they should be removed before the facing is added.)

DEAR POLLY — Glue a rubber fruit-jar ring on the bottom of your dog's eating bowl. It will not slip or slide across the waxed kitchen floor any more. — MISS A.C.

DEAR POLLY — I have found that an empty potato chip can is perfect for carrying baby's bottle in the diaper bag. Any spills are contained in the can and not absorbed by the diapers. — CAROLYN.

DEAR POLLY — When baking a cream pie, sprinkle a small amount of flour on the bottom crust before putting in the filling. The crust will not be too moist. — ANNA.

DEAR POLLY — When ironing while the house is cool, pull the ironed clothes TOWARD you. When it is hot, pull them AWAY from you as you iron, and be more comfortable. — BERNICE.

DEAR POLLY — Recently I made some cover-your-own buttons for a dress and found a seamstress' awl (one of those sharp pointed-tools that looks like a short ice pick) a wonderful help in catching the material to the serrated edge on the underside of the button flange. — GLADYS.

The Nativity
